H. T. WEAVER IS LAD TO REST THIS AFTERNOON

Funeral Services For Leading Merchant Of Gettysburg Are Largely Attended.

A town, which held him in high esteem as a businessman, as a philanthropist and as a citizen interested always in Gettysburg's improvement and betterment, this afternoon paid H. T. Weaver, pioneer merchant, a last tribute by pausing for one hour while last rites were said over his body at the Weaver home on Baltimore street and afterward at the grave in Evergreen cemetery.

Between 2 and 3 o'clock most of the business places of the community were closed as a mark of respect for the passing of Mr. Weaver, whose death occurred Wednesday evening, and to allow proprietors and workers to attend the final obsequies.

Many Floral Tributes

The Weaver home was taxed to capacity for the services which were conducted by the Rev. N. L. Horn, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, who chose as his theme the subject of an editorial appearing in The Gettysburg Times, Thursday evening, entitled "A Good Man Passes."

The last rites were simple as Mr. Weaver would have wished since he himself was without ostentation or display.

Floral tributes from friends and relatives of the Weaver family, business associates here and elsewhere and organizations banked the casket filled the room in which the body lay and overflowed into adjoining rooms. The flowers and floral pieces were as beautiful and symbolical as it was possible for the florists to design them.

Five employees of the G. W. Weaver and Son department store, who had been associated with Mr. Weaver for a number of years, and one, who left the employ of the concern after many years' service were pallbearers. They were Samuel Rhine, C. Edward Swisher, James Strickhouser, Javens Plank, S. L. Lieberknight and Joseph McGuire.

"Good Men Are Rare"

The Rev. Mr. Horn took the text for his sermon from Revelation: "Thou hast a few names in Sardis that did not defile their garments."

"Clever men are numerous," the minister said, "but good men are rare. This is the idea expressed in the text. Only a few names were found in Sardis, the capital of the Lydian empire, one of the greatest cities of primitive history. It was noted for its commercial prosperity. Its status in the first century of the Christian era is expressed in these words. I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and thou art dead. But read on, thou hast a few names that did not defile their garments. Sardis is safe; it has a few good men. Good men do make the town. The town truly grows with them."

BILL BRANDIFF TO PILOT BULLETS IN COMING YEAR

Election Is Held at Conclusion of Annual Football Banquet Friday Evening.

"Bill" Brandiff will pilot the Bullet football team in 1927.

Brandiff's election came at the conclusion of the annual banquet tendered the members of the football squad, managers, alumni and guests by Gettysburg College athletic council held in the Hotel Gettysburg Friday evening.

The naming of a captain at this time came as a surprise to many followers of the sport in Gettysburg, as it had been previously rumored that the election would not take place until after the second game of the 1927 season.

The banquet, one of the most unique ever tendered a team from the standpoint of the absence of speeches, was presided over by Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of the college, and after a few remarks in which he extolled the integrity and sportsmanlike spirit displayed by the team this year he adjourned the banquet in order that the members of the varsity squad could decide upon the election of a captain.

Brandiff, playing at full back during the greater part of the season, hails from Salem, New Jersey. His playing during the past year was consistent and his ability in running the team on the field was recognized early. During the latter part of the season, Brandiff was laid up with a painful but not severe injury to his back which confined him to the Warner Hospital for several weeks.

The question of electing a captain was discussed for a long time before it was finally decided. Dr. Hanson, Coach W. W. Wood, Doyle Leathers, graduate manager of athletics; Harry Stahler, of Norristown; George Hummel, York, and A. E. Rice, Biglerville, met with the varsity.

Managers for the coming year announced by Doctor Hanson were George Cobavagh, Charles Eisenhart, Roy Colman and Douglas Widner, assistant managers.

MISS PRICKETT TO BECOME BRIDE

Engagement Is Announced at Luncheon And Bridge Given by Sisters Today.

The engagement of Miss Esther Griest Prickett, daughter of Mrs. E. M. G. Prickett and the late Josiah Prickett, to Joseph I. Stubbs, of Kennett Square, was announced at a luncheon which was given at 1 o'clock today by Miss Prickett's sisters, Misses Eleanor and Mary Prickett, at their home in Flora Dale.

Pink was the prevailing color used in decorating the rooms, bouquets of sweet peas and carnations forming the center pieces on the small tables at which the guests were seated. The secret, which was announced by notes concealed in stuffed dates, came as a complete surprise to the guests.

After luncheon each person hemmed a tea towel for the bride-to-be and played bridge.

Miss Prickett attended George School, Hood College and the Appleby Kindergarten School, in Baltimore, after which she taught in the kindergartens in several Florida cities.

Mr. Stubbs is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Stubbs, of Germantown. He is an alumnus of Penn State College and a member of the Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity.

The marriage will take place early in the coming month.

Guests at the luncheon today included Misses Anna and Alice Black, Mrs. William C. Tyson, Mrs. C. Arthur Griest, Mrs. Lucille Walton, Mrs. R. E. Underwood, Mrs. Wallace Peters, Mrs. Eugene Craighead, Mrs. H. D. Lewis, Mrs. Grover Myers, Miss Elizabeth Griest and Mrs. William Wilson.

500 Kiddies Are Guests At Movies

More than 500 kiddies were guests of the management of the Lincoln Way Theatre Friday afternoon. "As no Man has Loved" and a comedy were the cinema attractions. Manager McSherry opened the doors shortly after three-thirty o'clock and in a very short time every available seat was occupied and standing room was at a premium. This is an annual affair at the Lincoln Way Theatre.

At annual reorganization meetings of the Adams County Medical Society and the Annie M. Warner Hospital staff, held Friday afternoon at the hospital, Dr. Albert Woomey, Cashtown, was elected president of the former and Dr. T. C. Miller, Abbottstown, president of the latter.

Doctor Woomey succeeds Dr. C. G. Crist as president of the medical society. Other officers chosen were Dr. Byron C. Jones, Bendersville, first vice president; Dr. E. A. Runyon, Bendersville, second vice president, and Dr. J. P. Dalbey, Gettysburg, secretary-treasurer.

The medical society adopted resolutions upon the death of Dr. L. F. MacNair, of Littlestown, whose death occurred Wednesday afternoon, in which the society deplored the loss of a "good member" and the profession a "conscientious practitioner."

Members of the medical society present at the meeting were: Drs. H. S. Crouse, Littlestown; E. A. Miller, Gettysburg; George Seaks, New Oxford; Henry Stewart, Gettysburg; E. A. Runyon, Bendersville; J. McCrea Dickson, Gettysburg, and J. P. Dalbey, Gettysburg.

Doctor Miller, Abbottstown, succeeds Dr. H. S. Crouse, Littlestown, as president of the hospital staff. Other officers chosen were Dr. H. E. Gettler, Littlestown, vice president, and Dr. E. A. Miller, Gettysburg, secretary.

SERVICES HELD FOR DR. MACNAIR

A number of Gettysburg physicians attended funeral services Friday evening for Dr. L. F. MacNair, prominent physician, who died at his home in Littlestown, Wednesday afternoon. The services, conducted by the Rev. D. S. Kammerer, were largely attended.

This morning the body was shipped to Philadelphia where this afternoon a brief service was held after which interment was made in Mount Moriah cemetery.

Physicians from Gettysburg who attended the Friday evening service were Drs. J. McCrea Dickson, C. G. Crist, H. M. Hartman, Walter O'Neal and E. A. Miller.

2 Resignations Given Council; Officer to be Indefinitely Retained

Frank Peckman Quits Councilmanic Office; W. G. Weaver Resigns as Borough Treasurer.

The resignations of Frank R. Peckman, one of the three councilmen from the second ward, and William G. Weaver, borough treasurer, were presented to council at its January meeting, Friday evening. Both resignations were accepted with regrets.

No attempt was made to fill either position, although the names of two applicants for the treasurer's position were presented. Council decided, however, to hold both positions open until the February meeting.

The resignation of Mr. Peckman was not a surprise to many of the councilmen and those persons associated with the borough solons. The second ward councilman had attended only a few meetings last year, and it was considered likely that he would hand in his resignation at any time.

Appointment Held Over

Mr. Peckman, a former president of council, was re-elected to represent the second ward in the 1923 election. C. E. Tawney and J. Allen Dickson are the other two members from the second ward.

The president of council has power to appoint a successor for any member who withdraws from council, but President Stock said he would not name Mr. Peckman's successor until he had an opportunity to confer with the other two members from the second ward. Mr. Peckman is a Republican and his successor will undoubtedly be of the same political faith.

Mr. Peckman's resignation contained no reason for withdrawing from office.

Mr. Weaver's resignation stated that he was planning to devote all of his time to the active management of the G. W. Weaver and Son department store, succeeding his father, H. T. Weaver, whose death occurred Wednesday evening.

Two Applicants

Mr. Weaver succeeded P. R. Bikle as treasurer three years ago. In accepting Mr. Weaver's resignation, council directed the secretary to extend the retiring treasurer council's sympathy on the death of his father.

Although Mr. Weaver's resignation was not received until late Friday afternoon, two applicants for the position entered the field at the meeting. They were LeRoy Winebrenner, borough engineer, and Roy E. Zinn, former county treasurer.

LOCAL RED MEN VISIT AT HANOVER

Visitors from tribes at New Oxford, Gettysburg, Littlestown, Labett York, Spring Grove, Williamsport, Harrisburg and Philadelphia attended the forty-third anniversary meeting and banquet in the wigwam of Minawakaru tribe No. 250, Improved Order of Red Men, Hanover, Friday evening.

The degree team, under Captain A. D. Houser, conferred the adoption degree on a class of 28 at the opening of the meeting, after which the anniversary committee, composed of H. J. Hahn, Roy C. Hart, George Mundis, H. C. Miller and F. W. Gegenstaben, took charge of the celebration.

Addresses were given by Great Sachem Walter Gross, Philadelphia; Great Junior Sagamore J. Calvin Upm, Columbia; Great Chief of Records Thomas L. Fraser, Philadelphia; Past Great Sachem H. O. Burnett, Harrisburg; Past Sachem Park McCormick, Harrisburg, and Past Great Sachem P. J. Kite, Philadelphia.

Truckers Ask That Out of Town Draymen be Prohibited From Doing Local Hauling.

Although the session was lengthy and wordy, a spirit of peace and harmony prevailed among the members at the January meeting of borough council Friday evening. As a result of the harmonious feeling, council disposed of many constructive matters.

Council voted to purchase five new tires and tubes for the Brookway pumper and the service truck, to cut down the size of the wheels on the service truck, so that the tires of the Brookway will be interchangeable with those on the service truck, and to purchase a new battery for the Boyd pumper.

A committee from the fire company, which asked for the new tires and improvements to the service truck, informed the councilmen that the entire cost would not be in excess of $265. The battery will cost in the neighborhood of $40.

Truckers Want Protection

A committee representing local truckers appeared before council to ask for protection, in the form of the licensing of out-of-town haulers, who come in from other towns and take loads of freight away from here. The delegation, for which Martin Shealer spoke, also indicated that other persons operating trucks in Gettysburg, although not in the hauling business regularly, should be compelled to pay the borough license. Council tabled the matter until a later meeting.

Council instructed the borough solicitor to notify persons who gave notes for street paving on West High and South Washington streets to meet their obligations, or have liens entered against them. The amount of the notes held by the borough totals between $300 and $400, it was stated.

Ralph Redding, fire marshal, appeared before council to ask for a ruling on his position, in view of the fact that the fire company, at its December meeting, elected Horace Smiley as fire marshal. Mr. Redding said Mr. Smiley had demanded his fire marshal's badge, and he asked council if he should give it up. The fire company has been making recommendations for fire marshals, which are usually confirmed by council.

After looking up the ordinance, council informed Mr. Redding to remain on duty until the March meeting.

Second Policeman Retained

The question of continuing the services of a second policeman was injected into the meeting, but quickly disposed of. Inasmuch as the minutes of the September meeting disclosed that Mervin Cluck was not elected for any definite period, council decided not to change the police force.

Although no action was taken, council decided to hereafter compel all sewers to be placed in alleys, together with telephone, telegraph and electric light lines.

Council voted to pay the expenses of Burgess C. A. Heiges to the annual state convention of Pennsylvania boroughs which meets in Harrisburg next month.

Burgess Heiges' report for 1926 showed collections of $1670, which was $575 more than the year before, and still $350 in bus license fees to be collected. The collections came from digging, building and sewer permits, licenses for shows and peddlers, taxi and truck licenses and fines.

Councilmen present at the meeting were: P. C. Stock, president; G. W. Rex, W. I. Oyer, J. E. Snyder, N. B. Schnurman, J. Allen Dickson, C. E. Tawney and W. A. Miller.

INFANT SUCCUMBS TO PNEUMONIA

Ruth Arlene Naylor died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Naylor, Carlisle, Wednesday evening from pneumonia. The child was three months and fifteen days old.

The infant is survived by her parents, two sisters, Myrtle and Josephine, at home, and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Naylor, Aspers, and William Kuhn, Biglerville, R. D.

The body was removed to the home of the grandparents at Aspers from where funeral services were held this morning at 9:30 o'clock, the Rev. O. D. Coble officiating. Interment was made at Wenskyville.

Pallbearers were Aaron Kuhn, Albert Kuhn, Waybright Heller and Carl Naylor.

Election Is Held at Conclusion of Annual Football Banquet Friday Evening.

"Bill" Brandiff will pilot the Bullet football team in 1927.

Brandiff's election came at the conclusion of the annual banquet tendered the members of the football squad, managers, alumni and guests by Gettysburg College athletic council held in the Hotel Gettysburg Friday evening.

The naming of a captain at this time came as a surprise to many followers of the sport in Gettysburg, as it had been previously rumored that the election would not take place until after the second game of the 1927 season.

The banquet, one of the most unique ever tendered a team from the standpoint of the absence of speeches, was presided over by Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of the college, and after a few remarks in which he extolled the integrity and sportsmanlike spirit displayed by the team this year he adjourned the banquet in order that the members of the varsity squad could decide upon the election of a captain.

Brandiff, playing at full back during the greater part of the season, hails from Salem, New Jersey. His playing during the past year was consistent and his ability in running the team on the field was recognized early. During the latter part of the season, Brandiff was laid up with a painful but not severe injury to his back which confined him to the Warner Hospital for several weeks.

The question of electing a captain was discussed for a long time before it was finally decided. Dr. Hanson, Coach W. W. Wood, Doyle Leathers, graduate manager of athletics; Harry Stahler, of Norristown; George Hummel, York, and A. E. Rice, Biglerville, met with the varsity.

Managers for the coming year announced by Doctor Hanson were George Coughlin, Charles Eisenhart, Roy Colman and Douglas Widner, assistant managers.

MISS PRICKETT TO BECOME BRIDE

Engagement Is Announced at Luncheon And Bridge Given by Sisters Today.

The engagement of Miss Esther Griest Prickett, daughter of Mrs. E. M. G. Prickett and the late Josiah Prickett, to Joseph I. Stubbs, of Kennett Square, was announced at a luncheon which was given at 1 o'clock today by Miss Prickett's sisters, Misses Eleanor and Mary Prickett, at their home in Flora Dale.

Pink was the prevailing color used in decorating the rooms, bouquets of sweet peas and carnations forming the center pieces on the small tables at which the guests were seated. The secret, which was announced by notes concealed in stuffed dates, came as a complete surprise to the guests.

After luncheon each person hummed a tea towel for the bride-to-be and played bridge.

Miss Prickett attended George School, Hood College and the Appleby Kindergarten School, in Baltimore, after which she taught in the kindergartens in several Florida cities.

Mr. Stubbs is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Stubbs, of Germantown. He is an alumnus of Penn State College and a member of the Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity.

The marriage will take place early in the coming month.

Guests at the luncheon today included Misses Anna and Alice Black, Mrs. William C. Tyson, Mrs. C. Arthur Griest, Mrs. Lucille Walton, Mrs. R. E. Underwood, Mrs. Wallace Peters, Mrs. Eugene Craighead, Mrs. H. D. Lewis, Mrs. Grover Myers, Miss Elizabeth Griest and Mrs. William Wilson.

500 Kiddies Are Guests At Movies

More than 500 kiddies were guests of the management of the Lincoln Way Theatre Friday afternoon. "As no Man has Loved" and a comedy were the cinema attractions. Manager McSherry opened the doors shortly after three-thirty o'clock and in a very short time every available seat was occupied and standing room was at a premium. This is an annual affair at the Lincoln Way Theatre.

At annual reorganization meetings of the Adams County Medical Society and the Annie M. Warner Hospital staff, held Friday afternoon at the hospital, Dr. Albert Woomer, Cash-town, was elected president of the former and Dr. T. C. Miller, Abbottstown, president of the latter.

Doctor Woomer succeeds Dr. C. G. Crist as president of the medical society. Other officers chosen were Dr. Byron C. Jones, Bendersville, first vice president; Dr. E. A. Runyon, Bendersville, second vice president, and Dr. J. P. Dalbey, Gettysburg, secretary-treasurer.

The medical society adopted resolutions upon the death of Dr. I. F. MacNair, of Littlestown, whose death occurred Wednesday afternoon, in which the society deplored the loss of a "good member" and the profession a "conscientious practitioner."

Members of the medical society present at the meeting were: Drs. H. S. Crouse, Littlestown; E. A. Miller, Gettysburg; George Seaks, New Oxford; Henry Stewart, Gettysburg; E. A. Runyon, Bendersville; J. McCrea Dickson, Gettysburg, and J. P. Dalbey, Gettysburg.

Doctor Miller, Abbottstown, succeeds Dr. H. S. Crouse, Littlestown, as president of the hospital staff. Other officers chosen were Dr. H. E. Gettler, Littlestown, vice president, and Dr. E. A. Miller, Gettysburg, secretary.

SERVICES HELD FOR DR. MACNAIR

A number of Gettysburg physicians attended funeral services Friday evening for Dr. I. F. MacNair, prominent physician, who died at his home in Littlestown, Wednesday afternoon. The services, conducted by the Rev. D. S. Kammerer, were largely attended.

This morning the body was shipped to Philadelphia where this afternoon a brief service was held after which interment was made in Mount Moriah cemetery.

Physicians from Gettysburg who attended the Friday evening service were Drs. J. McCrea Dickson, C. G. Crist, H. M. Hartman, Walter O'Neil and E. A. Miller.

2 Resignations Given Council; Officer to be Indefinitely Retained

Frank Peckman Quits Councilmanic Office; W. G. Weaver Re-signs as Borough Treasurer.

The resignations of Frank R. Peckman, one of the three councilmen from the second ward, and William G. Weaver, borough treasurer, were presented to council at its January meeting, Friday evening. Both resignations were accepted with regrets.

No attempt was made to fill either position, although the names of two applicants for the treasurer's position were presented. Council decided, however, to hold both positions open until the February meeting.

The resignation of Mr. Peckman was not a surprise to many of the councilmen and those persons associated with the borough solons. The second ward councilman had attended only a few meetings last year, and it was considered likely that he would hand in his resignation at any time.

Appointment Held Over
Mr. Peckman, a former president of council, was re-elected to represent the second ward in the 1923 election. C. E. Tawney and J. Allen Dickson are the other two members from the second ward.

The president of council has power to appoint a successor for any member who withdraws from council, but President Stock said he would not name Mr. Peckman's successor until he had an opportunity to confer with the other two members from the second ward. Mr. Peckman is a Republican and his successor will undoubtedly be of the same political faith.

Mr. Peckman's resignation contained no reason for withdrawing from office.

Mr. Weaver's resignation stated that he was planning to devote all of his time to the active management of the G. W. Weaver and Son department store, succeeding his father, H. T. Weaver, whose death occurred Wednesday evening.

Two Applicants

Mr. Weaver succeeded P. R. Bickle as treasurer three years ago. In accepting Mr. Weaver's resignation, council directed the secretary to extend the retiring treasurer council's sympathy on the death of his father.

Although Mr. Weaver's resignation was not received until late Friday afternoon, two applicants for the position entered the field at the meeting. They were LeRoy Winebrenner, borough engineer, and Roy E. Zinn, former county treasurer.

The degree team, under Captain A. D. Houser, conferred the adoption degree on a class of 28 at the opening of the meeting, after which the anniversary committee, composed of H. J. Hahn, Roy C. Hart, George Mundis, H. C. Miller and F. W. Gegensleben, took charge of the celebration.

Addresses were given by Great Sachem Walter Gross, Philadelphia; Great Junior Sagamore J. Calvin Upp, Columbia; Great Chief of Records Thomas L. Fraser, Philadelphia; Past Great Sachem H. O. Truckers Ask That Out of Town Draymen be Prohibited From Doing Local Hauling.

Although the session was lengthy and wordy, a spirit of peace and harmony prevailed among the members at the January meeting of borough council Friday evening. As a result of the harmonious feeling, council disposed of many constructive matters.

Council voted to purchase five new tires and tubes for the Brockway pumper and the service truck, to cut down the size of the wheels on the service truck, so that the tires of the Brockway will be interchangeable with those on the service truck, and to purchase a new battery for the Boyd pumper.

A committee from the fire company, which asked for the new tires and improvements to the service truck, informed the councilmen that the entire cost would not be in excess of $265. The battery will cost in the neighborhood of $40.

Truckers Want Protection

A committee representing local truckers appeared before council to ask for protection, in the form of the licensing of out-of-town haulers, who come in from other towns and take loads of freight away from here. The delegation, for which Martin Shealer spoke, also indicated that other persons operating trucks in Gettysburg, although not in the hauling business regularly, should be compelled to pay the borough license. Council tabled the matter until a later meeting.

Council instructed the borough solicitor to notify persons who gave notes for street paving on West High and South Washington streets to meet their obligations, or have liens entered against them. The amount of the notes held by the borough totals between $300 and $400, it was stated.

Ralph Redding, fire marshal, appeared before council to ask for a ruling on his position, in view of the fact that the fire company, at its December meeting, elected Horace Smiley as fire marshal. Mr. Redding said Mr. Smiley had demanded his fire marshal's badge, and he asked council if he should give it up. The fire company has been making recommendations for fire marshals, which are usually confirmed by council.

After looking up the ordinance, council informed Mr. Redding to remain on duty until the March meeting.

Second Policeman Retained

The question of continuing the services of a second policeman was injected into the meeting, but quickly disposed of. Inasmuch as the minutes of the September meeting disclosed that Mervin Cluck was not elected for any definite period, council decided not to change the police force.

Although no action was taken, council decided to hereafter compel all sewers to be placed in alleys, together with telephone, telegraph and electric light lines.

Council voted to pay the expenses of Burgess C. A. Heiges to the annual state convention of Pennsylvania boroughs which meets in Harrisburg next month.

Burgess Heiges' report for 1926 showed collections of $1670, which was $573 more than the year before, and still $350 in bus license fees to be collected. The collections came from digging, building and sewer permits, licenses for shows and peddlers, taxi and truck licenses and fines.

Councilmen present at the meeting were: P. C. Stock, president; G. W. Rex, W. I. Oyley, J. E. Snyder, N. B. Schurmair, J. Allen Dickson, C. E. Tawney and W. A. Miller.

STEELTON NOSES
OUT HIGH, 27-24

Nip and Tuck Battle Lost by Inability of Local Players to Shoot From Foul Line.

Inability to score consistently from the foul line proved the down fall of the Maroon and White passers, Steelton High winning its third consecutive league contest, 27-24, at Steelton, Friday evening. The Martinnen showed their poorest form from the foul line this season, scoring but eight out of twenty-one free throws. Steelton also looked bad from the free throw line, garnishing eleven out of twenty-five tosses.

The game was furiously fought from start to finish. In the first quarter the team battled to a standstill, the score reading 5-5 at the end of that period. The second quarter was but a repetition of the first, each team netting 7 points. The half ended with the teams tied at 12 all.

In the second half the Maroon and White quintet secured a slight lead and led 19-18 at the end of the third quarter. In the final period, the local team lost out on an apparently illegal goal. Fox, crack Steelton forward, shot a high goal that banked above the banking board and went in. This goal was allowed, but was bitterly protested by Gettysburg, who claimed the ball out of bounds. On the play Fox was fouled and he made one of the shots which sent his team into a 21-19 lead after which they were never headed.

Captain Fox, of Steelton, was the individual star of the fray. Fox succeeded in landing five double-deckers and also showed rare form from the foul line, netting 8 out of 12 tries. Captain Buohl and W. Bream played good games for the Martinnen.

William Penn opened its season by drubbing "Dutch" Weimer's clan, 33-23. York failed to show its expected strength and the Orange and Black had little trouble. John Harris and Lebanon staged a merry battle with the Harrisburg boys emerging the victor, 24-19. Williamsport flashed championship form by decisively defeating the Lancaster tossers 27-12 at Lancaster. Reading staged a comeback and defeated Sunbury, 45-17, at Reading.

Tonight the local boys will try a comeback when they meet the fast William Penn team of Harrisburg. In its first league game of the season last night William Penn flashed fine form and a battle royal can be expected tonight. The high school scrubs will meet the William Penn scrubs at 7 o'clock. The varsity game will start promptly at 8 o'clock.

Scrubs Defeated
The scrubs also took it on the nose, losing 30-16. The Steelton reserves completely outclassed the Maroon and White seconds and were never in danger throughout the game. At the end of the first half, Steelton led 20-5. In the final period the Martinnen outscored Steelton, but could not overcome the big lead. Kepner with 7 goals and 3 fouls featured for Steelton while Warren played well for the locals.

Y. C. I. SUBMERGES ACADEMY, 60-22

In its initial game of the season the Gettysburg Academy quintet went down to defeat at the hands of the powerful York Collegiate Institute five Friday night at York by the score of 60-22.

Although the collegians won by a decisive score the game was not as one-sided as it sounds. Every point was hotly contested and time after time the academy five broke up the speedy passing of the victors.

Prep tallied first when after a couple minutes of play Myerley shot one through from under the basket. The score was soon tied and after that Y. C. I. was never threatened until late in the first half when baskets by Altobello and Utz and a foul by Myerley brought the losers into the running.

The academy passers handled themselves nicely and show much promise of being one of the best teams ever put out in the history of the school.

Myerley and Altobello played a great game for the losers while Ulrich and Baker starred for the victors.

CO-EDS DEFEAT JUNIATA, 25-15

College Team Plays Fast Game to Down Visitors; Miss Schussler Scores 15 Points.

Jeers were turned into cheers, knockers into rooters, when Coach "Charlie" Hall's Gettysburg Co-ed basketball team defeated the fast Juniata team Friday night in the Old Gym by the impressive score of 25-15. After the first few minutes of play there was little doubt as to the winner. Close guarding by Captain Richards and Miss Black combined with accurate shooting on the part of Miss Schussler and Miss Fogel enabled the Gettysburg girls to keep a safe and comfortable lead throughout the game. Frequent opportunities to score were wasted by the Juniata forwards by inaccurate shooting.

The playing of Miss Melba Richards, side center, for Gettysburg along with the scoring of Miss Schussler, who scored fifteen of the Gettysburg's twenty-five points, was outstanding. Miss Fischer, center, played a fast game but showed up poorly by making wild passes.

The old gym was packed to the doors with the college students, many of them expecting to witness a first class comedy. Frequent jeers and "clever" remarks were made by the spectators during the first half of the game. However, any jeers or joking was soon turned to expressions of admiration, not to say surprise at the fast team work, accurate shooting and close guarding of Coach Hall's outfit. It is expected that the Gettysburg girls will experience the most successful season in the history of the college.

Following the game the members of the Juniata team were entertained at dinner by the members of the co-ed team. A party was afterward held at the Gamma Phi sorority house.

HIGH PEP CLUB AIDS AT GAMES

Organization Is Working Up Interest in Games; Membership Now About 45.

The Gettysburg High School pep club has swung into a strong stride since the beginning of the basketball season.

Committees have been appointed by the president for buying and selling confections at the games. The amounts sold have so far been large but the club is trying to increase it. The proceeds from these sales will be used for high school athletic purposes.

There has also been a constitution committee appointed to plan various activities for the club during the second semester.

Some objectives now in view are: Better attendance at the games, better spirit and organized cheering.

The club now consists of about forty-five carefully selected willing workers and they urge attendance to the games as "old high" has a team worth seeing.

useful should be particularly noticed is equally the dictate of reason and revelation. Neither example nor arguments are necessary to waken the sympathies of grateful people of such occasions. The death of public benefactors surcharge the heart and it spontaneously disburdens itself by a flow of sorrows.

"In the final analysis, whatever men say to the contrary, the real status of any individual is measured in terms of heart. This is the wisdom of God, for God looketh upon the heart. Character is the deepest fact of human life. It is the essential truth concerning a man. The man's character is the truth about that man written upon his personality. This is constantly and clearly read by God and disapproved slowly and blunderingly by his fellow men. But it is the fact, the essential fact, concerning the man."

"The earthly life of Mr. Weaver has terminated. For over forty years he has been before the public eye of this community. Now, at life's termination, what is his verdict? A good man passes. His speech and conduct were one. His profession and character were harmonious. He practiced what he preached.

"Here is an analysis of goodness which may be expressed in one word 'Christlikeness'. This good man had the spirit of Jesus. It might be said of him as was remarked about the disciples of old: We perceive and take knowledge that he had been with Jesus and had learned of Him. No greater epitaph can be written. Such a man is of God, a vessel unto honor, sanctified and meet for the Master's use, and prepared unto every good work. They are gems exceedingly rare. They add luster to a community. They are the strength of the church and the builders of the Kingdom of God!"

"Thank God for the righteous element of Gettysburg!—the good men and women! The life of this 'pioneer merchant and leader in civic affairs,' who is rated among the 'few names' which are the glory of the church and the integrity of the community. Well might we weep when such a man dies. They are the salt of the earth—the light of the world. They challenge us to the Jesus way of living. Carrying the spirit of Jesus down into all human relationships. It pays! This is the verdict of the life of Horatio T. Weaver, devoted husband and father, a Christian business man, a devout attendant at church worship, interested and liberal in the support of the church and all her benevolent causes, a civic benefactor, a friend of those in need—a good man."

STEELTON NOSES OUT HIGH, 27-24

Nip and Tuck Battle Lost by Inability of Local Players to Shoot From Foul Line.

Inability to score consistently from the foul line proved the down fall of the Maroon and White passers, Steelton High winning its third consecutive league contest, 27-24, at Steelton, Friday evening. The Martinmen showed their poorest form from the foul line this season, scoring but eight out of twenty-one free throws. Steelton also looked bad from the free throw line, garnishing eleven out of twenty-five tosses.

The game was furiously fought from start to finish. In the first quarter the team battled to a standstill, the score reading 5-5 at the end of that period. The second quarter was but a repetition of the first, each team netting 7 points. The half ended with the teams tied at 12 all.

In the second half the Maroon and White quintet secured a slight lead and led 19-18 at the end of the third quarter. In the final period, the local team lost out on an apparently illegal goal. Fox, crack Steelton forward, shot a high goal that banked above the banking board and went in. This goal was allowed, but was bitterly protested by Gettysburg, who claimed the ball out of bounds. On the play Fox was fouled and he made one of the shots which sent his team into a 21-19 lead after which they were never headed.

Captain Fox, of Steelton, was the individual star of the fray. Fox succeeded in landing five double-deckers and also showed rare form from the foul line, netting 8 out of 12 tries. Captain Buohi and W. Bream played good games for the Martinmen.

William Penn opened its season by drubbing "Dutch" Weimer's team, 33-23. York failed to show its expected strength and the Orange and Black had little trouble. John Harris and Lebanon staged a merry battle with the Harrisburg boys emerging the victor, 24-19. Williamsport flashed championship form by decisively defeating the Lancaster tossers 27-18 at Lancaster. Reading staged a comeback and defeated Sunbury, 45-17, at Reading.

Tonight the local boys will try a comeback when they meet the fast William Penn team of Harrisburg. In its first league game of the season last night William Penn flashed fine form and a battle royal can be expected tonight. The high school scrubs will meet the William Penn scrubs at 7 o'clock. The varsity game will start promptly at 8 o'clock.

The scrubs also took it on the nose, losing 30-16. The Steelton reserves completely outclassed the Maroon and White seconds and were never in danger throughout the game. At the end of the first half, Steelton led 20-5. In the final period the Martinmen outscored Steelton, but could not overcome the big lead. Kepner with 7 goals and 3 fouls featured for Steelton while Warren played well for the locals.

Y. C. I. SUBMERGES ACADEMY, 60-22

In its initial game of the season the Gettysburg Academy quintet went down to defeat at the hands of the powerful York Collegiate Institute five Friday night at York by the score of 60-22.

Although the collegians won by a decisive score the game was not as one-sided as it sounds. Every point was hotly contested and time after time the academy five broke up the speedy passing of the victors.

Prep tallied first when after a couple minutes of play Myerley shot one through from under the basket. The score was soon tied and after that Y. C. I. was never threatened until late in the first half when baskets by Altobello and Utz and a foul by Myerley brought the losers into the running.

The academy passers handled themselves nicely and show much promise of being one of the best teams ever put out in the history of the school.

Myerley and Altobello played a great game for the losers while Ullrich and Baker starred for the victors.

CO-EDS DEFEAT JUNIATA, 25-15

College Team Plays Fast Game to Down Visitors; Miss Schussler Scores 15 Points.

Jeers were turned into cheers, knockers into rooters, when Coach "Charlie" Hall's Gettysburg Co-ed basketball team defeated the fast Juniata team Friday night in the Old Gym by the impressive score of 25-15. After the first few minutes of play there was little doubt as to the winner. Close guarding by Captain Richards and Miss Black combined with accurate shooting on the part of Miss Schussler and Miss Fogel enabled the Gettysburg girls to keep a safe and comfortable lead throughout the game. Frequent opportunities to score were wasted by the Juniata forwards by inaccurate shooting.

The playing of Miss Melba Richards, side center, for Gettysburg along with the scoring of Miss Schussler, who scored fifteen of the Gettysburg's twenty-five points, was outstanding. Miss Fischer, center, played a fast game but showed poorly by making wild passes.

The old gym was packed to the doors with the college students, many of them expecting to witness a first class comedy. Frequent jeers and "clever" remarks were made by the spectators during the first half of the game. However, any jeers or joking was soon turned to expressions of admiration, not to say surprise at the fast team work, accurate shooting and close guarding of Coach Hall's outfit. It is expected that the Gettysburg girls will experience the most successful season in the history of the college.

Following the game the members of the Juniata team were entertained at dinner by the members of the co-ed team. A party was afterward held at the Gamma Phi sorority house.

The lineup:	Juniata
Fogel, forward	Dugan
Schussler, forward	Holsopple
Fischer, center	Bosley
M. Richards, side center	Garner
B. Richards, guard	Walker
Black, guard	Crone
Summary: Field goals—Fogel, 5; Schussler, 3; Dugan, 2; Holsopple, 4; foul goals—Schussler, 9; Dugan, 2. Substitutions: Hess for Holsopple; Ness for Walker.

AUTO NEWS

CHRYSLER CARS POPULAR AMONG BRITISH SUBJECTS

Called "Ideal Car" by Motorists of England in Questionnaire by Magazine.

The tremendous popularity of Chrysler cars in the British Isles is indicated in the replies to a recent columnar questionnaire conducted by "Motor" an English automobile magazine, for the ideal car to meet the definite driving conditions in Great Britain imposed by this magazine.

A very high percentage of the replies, single out the Chrysler "70" because its performance, as quoted by one writer, combined:

"A speed range of 5 to 70 miles an hour, easy gear change, quiet operation, minimum up-keep expense, hill-climbing ability, yet economy of operation, beauty of appearance, good braking facilities, and substantial comfort."

The concurrence of opinion of the majority of readers that an American-made car best suited English requirements is of striking significance. Especially is this unusual in view of the very determined stand taken by British manufacturers and their supporters to popularize British-made cars ahead of all foreign makes. English literature carries stamps requesting Britons to "Buy British Goods," while newspapers and other means are utilized in this determined effort to stop the inroads of American-made products. That the Chrysler was signalled out among all others is proof of its outstanding favor abroad.

Lieut. Col. A. F. Richardson, an ardent English motorist, incorporated the following in his description of his "Ideal Car":

"In April of 1925, I was looking for a car with the same requirements; so I bought a six-cylinder Chrysler. It filled every requirement and is the best I have owned in 15 years, regardless of price or nationality." This army officer indicated that no English-made car would provide the advantages which are to be secured in the Chrysler at any where near its price in England.

Another English motorist prepared the following for his description of the ideal car:

"I suggest the Chrysler two-seater ('roadster') as it answers most exactly the requirements raised. The speed of 5 to 75 miles an hour in top ('high speed') is unquestionably obtained, and the acceleration is the best I know. Springing is excellent, while the hydraulic four-wheel brakes are very powerful. Steering ease is excellent and the car holds the road at any speed."

"I am not, as a rule, an advocate of American cars, and I am entirely disinterested in the Chrysler, but I have had one now for a year and I must admit it is an exception. It has done 12,500 miles and I have not had to spend anything on repairs; but for being decarbonized once, it has never been touched, and runs as smoothly as ever. There is no question, I think, but that these cars are really good and will last forever."

J. R. L. McGilowry in the same issue of "Motor" declared:

"Taking all the requirements into consideration, I should say that the Chrysler would be the best choice, since it has those exceptionally good brakes and acceleration."

As evidenced at the Olympia Show, recently concluded in London, British manufacturers are attempting to stem the trend of popular favor toward American-made cars with six new models displayed at the show which are to compete directly with automobiles made in the United States. This policy of urging British people to buy British-made goods is being pressed through newspapers, magazines, and by the use of special stamps on mailing pieces. Despite this propaganda urging the use of British-made goods, Chrysler continues to be the most popular American-made car in England where it is said to represent the ideal conception of quality, comfort, and fine appearance at low price.

The Gossipin' Motorist

By Morriso

The secretary of the Gettysburg Motor Club wanted me to wish you all a—"Happy New Year" and "Joyous New Year" are such trite expressions that he hesitated and then after deciding just what he wanted to say told me to put in this column "Just a dog-gone good prosperity." Well, that may be trite, also, but none of us is likely to object to prosperity, and anyway that's what we all want.

Any of you car owners who come to Gettysburg to shop should beware of the tire thieves. They have been operating about the town but mostly near the railroad crossing on Carlisle street. Don't park your car below the tracks. Keep in the lighted zones and take caution to have the extra tires on the rear of the car or elsewhere locked.

It seems that there is a mighty good chance of the legislature adopting some kind of a uniform traffic regulation for this state. The Pennsylvania Motor Federation with its 100,000 members is backing the movement along with the 42 cities, towns and boroughs of the state for a definite uniformity in traffic methods, so that a person from one place upon entering a strange city or town will know beforehand just what the traffic rules are.

The Gettysburg Motor Club is making extensive plans for its big general meeting for all car owners of Adams county some time in January. The meeting will probably be held before the fifteenth and a well-known speaker will be brought for the occasion. And by the way, when the date is announced in the papers don't forget to hold open the event and be on hand for the meeting will be of especial interest to every car owner. Every car owner in the county will be invited.

A professor at State College has had a dream and now wants the State Highway department to effect his plan; namely, that the roads be made of materials which contain a phosphorescent substance which will "glow softly" at night acting as an agent against night accidents. The road will not "glow softly" but with traffic on such a road and cars not using bright lights such a condition will be an improvement over the present type of road. The fact that the roads will be brightened by the phosphorescent substance will lessen the necessity for "bright lights" and minimize possible accidents through "glaring" headlights. It might work; it sounds good enough for a trial.

And speaking of headlights—the glaring kind—better see that yours conform with legal requirements, for the patrol is watching the cars and those whose lights are illegal are causing the owners a deal of trouble. Check up at least once a month and you will be all right.

Under the influence of San Cura Ointment surprising improvement is made so quickly that it seems almost miraculous.

Stubborn cases of piles like those of Rev. W. F. Gilbert, of Titusville, Pa., vanish before the marvelous antiseptic Ointment. Mr. Gilbert writes:

"For twenty years I suffered with bleeding and itching piles; at times I was confined to the house for more than a month. Two years ago I began using San Cura Ointment and one 60c jar made a firm and permanent cure. I have not been troubled since."

San Cura Ointment is guaranteed to help any of the above named diseases or money back. It relieves pain from burns, cuts and bruises, draws out the poison and often heals in a short time. 30c, 60c and $1.25 at People's Drug Store.—adv.

CHEVROLET HAS NEW MACHINE

Company to Build What They Claim to be the Best in Their History.

Surpassing all its former achievements as the world's largest manufacturer of three-speed transmission cars, the Chevrolet Motor Company, has announced an entirely new line of automobiles, heralded as the most beautiful in Chevrolet history.

Embodied in the new line, which has been on display throughout the country, are hosts of improvements, many of which were found hitherto only in larger and more costly cars. The economics of tremendous volume production have made possible the marks of distinction which individualize the new line, according to a factory statement.

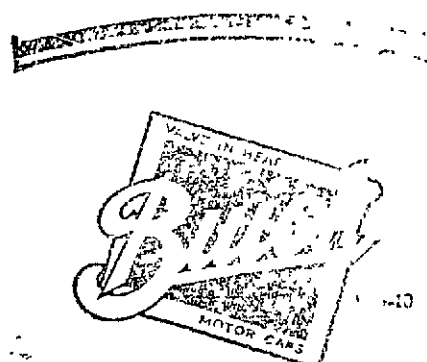

The new cars are mechanically finer, entirely new in body lines, smarter in appearance, complete in equipment and outstanding in the display of colors. Seven models, five closed and two open cars, comprise the line. One model, a rakish, beautiful sport cabriolet, has been added.

Some of the standard features on the new models are as follows—AC air cleaner, AC oil filter, balloon tires, bullet-type headlamps and cowl-lamps, newly designed radiator shell, one piece full-crown fenders, heavier running boards, larger steering wheel, save yourself the cost of legal action. Lamps often and easily get out of focus.

Do you know that in 1913 a bill in the Legislature was defeated which asked the state to bond itself for $50,000,000 for better road construction, and that during the present administration the state has spent $320,000,000 in road work? A good bit of the "push" in securing these roads has been initiated by the various A. A. A. motor clubs throughout the state.

One of the plans of the Motor Club of Adams County is to place appropriate signs about the county warning motorists of bad curves, grades, crossings, as well as directing them to main roads and towns. Have any of you suggestions on places about the county where such signs are needed? Send me your suggestions in care of the Gettysburg Motor Club and they will be turned over to the committee on signs.

WILLYS FORCE IS INCREASED 1423

Increased Production Necessitates Addition of New Men to Already Large Force.

Toledo, Ohio.—A statement given out by John N. Willys, president of Willys-Overland, Inc., today says that the factory force has been increased by 1423 men during the past few weeks.

Coming at the beginning of the year this is a noteworthy announcement and is in line with the statement issued by Willys-Overland officials that production plans for the year contemplate the largest output of motor cars in the history of the organization.

Heavy production is underway in the Whippet which has already established itself as the fastest selling new model ever introduced to the American market.

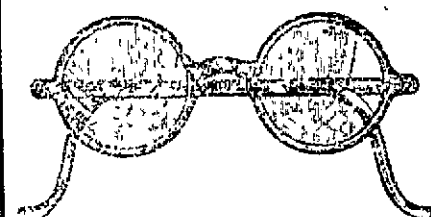

At the present time Willys-Overland products cover 93% of the entire range of motor cars.

Since 1922 Willys-Overland has increased its output of Willys-Knight cars 138% while the increase in the motor car industry as a whole has been 60% giving the Willys-Knight division a rating 78% better than the industry as a whole.

In the Overland division the increase up to the introduction of the Whippet was 98% or 38% better than the industry. Present sales volume of the Whippet indicates that the lower price division in Willys-Overland will equal the gains made by Willys-Knight cars before the coming year is over.

The principal difference between Capital and Labor is the question of who shall have the capital.

America has always expected great things from its greatest industry. But the announcement of the Most Beautiful Chevrolet has been the automotive sensation of all time!

Here is a car which in beauty, luxury, quality and modern design challenges the costliest creations of the day. Here, in a price class where average standards have been the rule, is now offered a car so far beyond all expectation that comparisons cease to exist.

Seven superb models styled as low priced cars were never styled before and offering such marks of fine car distinction as: full crown one-piece fenders, bullet type lamps and "fish tail" rear deck modeling! And, above all, infinitely finer quality—the result of a host of additional improvements such as AC oil filter, AC air cleaner, coincidental steering and ignition lock, larger 17" steering wheel, gasoline gauge and many, many others!

All this is combined to a supreme degree in the long famous leader of the Chevrolet line—the Coach. It would be a brilliant achievement for any manufacturer merely to design such a splendid car to sell at any reasonably low price. But due to economies of tremendous production plus the vast resources of General Motors, Chevrolet also announces striking price reductions on other models.

AUTO NEWS

CHRYSLER CARS POPULAR AMONG BRITISH SUBJECTS

Called "Ideal Car" by Motorists of England in Questionnaire by Magazine.

The tremendous popularity of Chrysler cars in the British Isles is indicated in the replies to a recent columnar questionnaire conducted by "Motor" an English automobile magazine, for the ideal car to meet the definite driving conditions in Great Britain imposed by this magazine.

A very high percentage of the replies single out the Chrysler "70" because its performance, as quoted by one writer, combined:

"A speed range of 5 to 70 miles an hour, easy gear change, quiet operation, minimum up-keep expense, hill-climbing ability, yet economy of operation, beauty of appearance, good braking facilities, and substantial comfort."

The concurrence of opinion of the majority of readers that an American-made car best suited English requirements is of striking significance. Especially is this unusual in view of the very determined stand taken by British manufacturers and their supporters to popularize British-made cars ahead of all foreign makes. English literature carries stamps requesting Britons to "Buy British Goods," while newspapers and other means are utilized in this determined effort to stop the inroads of American-made products. That the Chrysler was signalled out among all others is proof of its outstanding favor abroad.

Lieut. Col. A. F. Richardson, an ardent English motorist, incorporated the following in his description of his "Ideal Car":

"In April of 1925, I was looking for a car with the same requirements; so I bought a six-cylinder Chrysler. It filled every requirement and is the best I have owned in 15 years, regardless of price or nationality." This army officer indicated that no English-made car would provide the advantages which are to be secured in the Chrysler at any where near its price in England.

Another English motorist prepared the following for his description of the ideal car:

"I suggest the Chrysler two-seater ('roadster') as it answers most exactly the requirements raised. The speed of 5 to 75 miles an hour in top ('high speed') is unquestionably obtained, and the acceleration is the best I know. Springing is excellent, while the hydraulic four-wheel brakes are very powerful. Steering ease is excellent and the car holds the road at any speed.

"I am not, as a rule, an advocate of American cars, and I am entirely disinterested in the Chrysler, but I have had one now for a year and I must admit it is an exception. It has done 12,500 miles and I have not had to spend anything on repairs; but for being decarbonized once, it has never been touched, and runs as smoothly as ever. There is no question, I think, but that these cars are really good and will last forever."

J. R. L. McGiloway in the same issue of "Motor" declared:

"Taking all the requirements into consideration, I should say that the Chrysler would be the best choice, since it has those exceptionally good brakes and acceleration."

As evidenced at the Olympia Show, recently concluded in London, British manufacturers are attempting to stem the trend of popular favor toward American-made cars with six new models displayed at the show which are to compete directly with automobiles made in the United States. This policy of urging British people to buy British-made goods is being pressed through newspapers, magazines, and by the use of special stamps on mailing pieces. Despite this propaganda urging the use of British-made goods, Chrysler continues to be the most popular American-made car in England where it is said to represent the ideal conception of quality, comfort, and fine appearance at low price.

Out of the Past

Happenings of Days Gone by as Chronicled in The Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times, the Files Reveal.

TEN YEARS AGO

Start Repairs to Town Church: Work was started this morning on improvements to the Presbyterian church, and operations will go forward as rapidly as possible for the next few weeks. It is expected that everything will be completed and the main auditorium ready for occupancy within one month. In the meantime the services will be held in the lecture room.

The old pews were removed today with the exception of the Lincoln pew which was left in the church. The new pews will be arranged in about the same order as the old ones. They will be of birch in a mahogany finish.

Gives Recital: One of the musical events of the mid-winter season at Harrisburg will be the organ recital this evening by J. Herbert Springer, a member of the freshman class at Gettysburg College. The papers have given much publicity to the event which is attracting considerable attention in musical circles in the capital city.

Joins the Navy: Eugene Richards, of South Washington street, was the first Gettysburgian to enroll himself as an applicant for enlistment in the United States Navy when the recruiting party opened their office here this morning. Mr. Richards has been employed at the furniture factory and also at local tailoring shops.

Boys Are Fined: Three high school boys found with cigarettes on their persons paid fines of $5 each upon refusing to disclose the name of the person or firm from whom they secured the "smokes." The school authorities are doing everything possible to break up the habit among the boys.

Gettysburg May Have White Way: In an effort to provide Gettysburg's main business section with modern lighting facilities, a canvass of a number of stores, hotels and other establishments has been started and is meeting with a most hearty response. It is the plan to have Center Square and the four business streets entering the square illuminated for one block with light standards similar to those in use in many other towns and cities and providing a "white way."

Many Guides to Take the Tests: Monday was the last day for the filing of applications for battlefield licenses prior to the examination scheduled to begin on January 22. There are twenty-three new applicants and sixteen holdovers, making a total of thirty-nine who wish to qualify to take the tourists over the field.

Not one college student make application for license, so that the story that many of them would seek badges seems to have been without foundation.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

CONFLICT

To keep a man fit, it takes bad years, loss, failures, and retreating friends.

Easy success, with its downy cushions, never made a man. It's when we come to feel most alone, and therefore most dependent upon our unearned and unenvied powers, that we get into the training that gives us place before others and establishes our standing.

It's daily, hourly conflict all through life that gives the longest and, all things considered, the happiest experience. For he who has suffered much is able to counsel and comfort best. For he has been seared by life, battered, and cleansed of his dross in life's fiery furnace.

He who has learned to bear insult, assault and bitter reproach unjustly given instantly disarms the one who gives them.

There is no way out of it—the bitter must be taken along with, before or following, the sweet in this life.

The ounce of gold which we tuck into our heart must be paid with its ounce of dross which the sweat of our soul discards.

And the conflict goes on. We think it so unfair. We beg for a little freedom. We smile up at the stars. We talk to them—but get in return nothing but their undying twinkle, blinked from billions of miles away.

My boyhood was spent in the midst of something akin to poverty. I used to watch my mother work day by day throughout the years and wonder if the time would ever come when she wouldn't have to work or when I would be able to make it possible for her to rest and end her life in ease as a reward for all she had endured. But the time never came while yet she was here. The conflict of her life, however, remains in all its sweetness of strength and serenity—for she never once complained.

Conflict is a kind of food to a conquering spirit.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest

EMOTION

I don't respond to music fine
 As many do, I know.
 This very curious heart of mine
 Has other pleasures, though.
 And it will leap and dance about
 To see a rose come budding out.
 And gets a most exquisite thrill
 From any song bird's morning trill.

Some tremble at the violin
 And sense a joy profound,
 But I am not so stirred within
 By such a plaintive sound.
 I lose the magic power of tone,
 But I have trembled and have known
 The ecstasy which strings possess
 In other forms of loveliness.

What music is to some, a book,
 A child, a stream, a tree,
 A cheering word, a friendly look
 And laughter are to me.

A lovely landscape can reveal
 To me what music-lovers feel,
 And I can sob, and scarce know why
 When poverty is passing by.

I sometimes throb with cruel pain
 When tragedy I see,
 In countless ways I can't explain
 This world entrances me.
 My pulses throb with real delight
 Beneath a starry sky at night.
 As some are moved by music heard,
 So I, by life itself, am stirred.

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

Sure enough, the "January thaw," which Lady Love had foretold in the story before this, had set in, for when the bunny boy awoke the next morning the icicles were dripping from the eaves and spring seemed just around the corner.

"I'm going to take a hop in the woods," said the little rabbit, as he finished his Clover Cereal without a murmur. He was a good little fellow and ate just what his dear Mother set before him—the way you do, my Little Readers, I'm sure. Mother knows what is good for us. Yes, indeed. And you all want to grow up strong and well. Of course you do. Well, I guess yes three times and a half.

After polishing the front door knob and feeding the canary, the little rabbit hopped out to the woodpile to bring in the kindling wood. He didn't forget to do his daily chores for Mother. No, siree, as Old Sam Hill used to say when your Uncle Dave was a boy down on the farm. In the country, you know, "chores" mean work. Yes, he always did these three little duties for Mother every day before he hopped out to play. Then putting on his little khaki cap and swinging his knapsack over his back, he hung his little red-striped candy cane on his left arm and started off. Down the winding path through the bushes he hopped, clipperly clip, lipperty lip, with never a stumble and nary a slip. "Haw, haw! Caw, caw!" all of a sudden sounded a well-known voice, and there on a tree stump Professor Jim Crow, his Wisdom Book under his wing and a big pair of spectacles on his beak.

"A few warm days have come around To melt the snow upon the ground," he cawed poetically, although not musically.

"Last night Mother said it would be warmer," laughed the little rabbit.

"You just listen to Mother and you won't go far wrong," advised the wise old bird with a chuckle. "Mothers know a lot more than they get credit for."

"Oh, I do," answered the little rabbit.

"At a boy," cawed the old professor bird. "Now follow me and I'll show you something in the Shady Forest."

"What is it?" asked the curious little rabbit.

"Wait and see," answered Professor Jim Crow. And on he flew just ahead of the bunny boy, who managed to keep him in sight only by hopping as fast as he could. By and by, after a while and a cheery smile, and a snowy mile, they reached the Shady Forest—not very shady, I'll admit, in the winter time, when the leaves strewn the ground instead of growing on the trees.

The solons agreed to close the contract for coats at the February meeting. Council appointed a committee of two to call on the Chamber of Commerce members to consult with them as to improving the lighting around the square. This body has asked council several times to make such improvements. W. Sadler was before council to ask for an increase in pay for winding and greasing the town clock. Council advanced his salary from $5 to $25 per year. The following bills were ordered paid: W. Volman, $25.00; Hanover Light Company, $189.90; C. B. Long, $77.75; Edward Auker, $6.50; Darling Packing Company, $30.44; Joseph Smith, $60.20; H. S. Sheetz, $12.52; A. Schriver, $50.00; Fitz Water Wheel Company, $32.83; Gilbert and Son, $3.75. Council asked the burgess to enforce the borough ordinance in reference to digging up streets by parties to open up sewerage without getting a permit to do so.

"Look over there," all of a sudden shouted the old crow. And, would you believe it? the astonished little rabbit saw a large butterfly. Yes, sir, this butterfly was fluttering about its yellow-edged, dark-wings, seemingly as contented as though spring had come with all the little balmy breezes.

"Goodness gracious me!" exclaimed the amazed little bunny.

"Caw, caw! Haw, haw!" cried the old crow, delighted to show his little pupil so strange a sight. "This butterfly was hatched out late in the fall, and spent the cold weather hiding, most likely, beneath a loose clapboard on your Little Red Barn. This mild weather has brought him out."

"Do you really think he was in your Little Red Barn?" cried the bunny boy.

"Well, he might have hidden in the edge of a haystack," laughed the old crow.

"I wonder he didn't freeze," sighed the little rabbit.

"Maybe he crept under the loosened bark of an old stump," went on the wise professor bird. "But, anyway, as soon as the sun warmed the air and the snow melted a little, out he came for an airing. I knew you'd like to see a winter butterfly."

"I must hop right home and tell Mother," cried the little rabbit. "Thank you, Professor Crow," and away went the bunny boy, clipperly clip, lipperty lip, with never a stumble and never a slip, to tell Lady Love something new that he had learned.

THE GOLDEN COCOON

Copyright, 1924, by Harper & Brothers
"The Golden Cocoon" with Helene Chadwick is a picturization of this novel by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

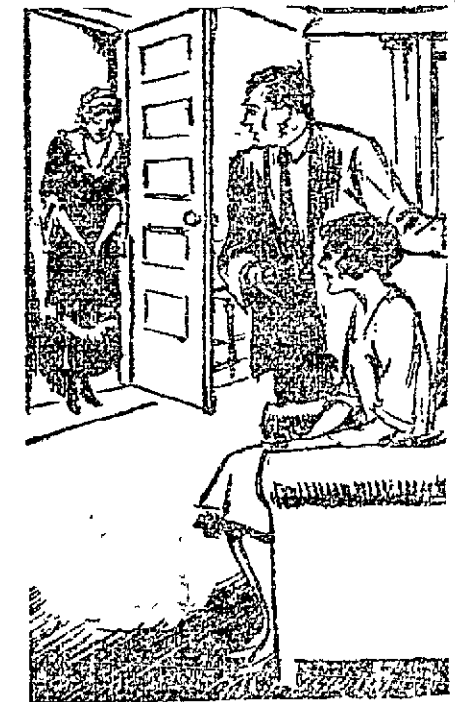

SYNOPSIS

Gregory Cochran, lawyer and political leader, is sheltering in his mother's home Molly Shannon, university student, whom he rescued from the river when, wandering aimlessly at night, she plunged in. Molly had become despondent when deserted by her fiancé, Stephen Renfro, efficiency expert, who married the daughter of "rich old Jim Dillworth." Cochran, proving a true friend, is gradually winning Molly's confidence and she is relating her sorrows to him.

She was magnificent indeed. She was faultless, consummate—in every detail from the exquisite waves of silver drawn from brow to ears, the web of creamy old lace at throat and wrists, to the hem of her lustrous black silk. Her magnificence consisted, though, not in her clothes; neither in her coiffure nor in the perfection of her grooming. Molly saw that at once, even while she shivered into nothingness in comparison. No, she was innately and predestinedly magnificent. It was in the very way she stood on the threshold—the quintessence of poise, the last word in presence. One had not far to seek where her son came by his sureness of motion, his "serene as a god above a storm."

To the latter she addressed herself, without noting, apparently, that there was anyone else in the room. "Gred dear, the telephone is really getting too much for me,

After a barely perceptible pause, the older woman bowed—slightly.

and, besides, you know you're due in the court-room at eleven."

"Yes, mother; I'm just coming. But—while you're here, I want you to meet Miss Shannon."

He stepped a little to one side and there might be no further supposition of Molly's not being seen. "Miss Shannon, my mother."

After a barely perceptible pause, the older woman bowed—slightly. She was looking rather over Molly than at her, and she did not advance a step farther into the room.

Molly bowed also—in silence. "Miss Shannon, by the way, is going back to school on Monday," he added, unperturbed by his mother's evident disapproval of Molly and all that had to do with her. "We've just agreed it's the best possible thing." He turned to Molly with a humorous question in his eyes. "We have agreed, haven't we?"

"At least you have," she answered soberly.

"It comes to the same. And, mother, I want you to ask Miss Shannon to have dinner with us as soon as she feels up to it—say tomorrow evening or the evening after."

There was a second pause, more portentous than the first. In the air was a measuring of swords. Molly felt it—over her head—as plainly as though she heard the clank of steel—why, she asked herself, dully resentful, should they be crossing swords over her? She didn't want to have dinner with them. She didn't want anything—but to be left alone.

At last Sarah Cochran said slowly but with meticulous courtesy: "We shall be glad to have Miss Shannon any time she cares to come, I'm sure." Her eyes were fixed, not on the prospective guest, but on her son.

CHAPTER XVIII

Stephen Renfro's marriage was still a new days' wonder, on everybody's lips, at the reassembled university. Wherever Molly went she knew that his name was whispered. Curious, speculative, no doubt pitying glances were exchanged behind her back. Occasionally some one more inquisitive—or less considerate—than the rest spoke of him to her. Here and there a darker suspicion raised its head, a suspicion never locking where a woman has been scorned and thrown aside. There was Miss Brian too. She never said anything, but her very existence was a silent reminder, an unintentional reproach.

All that did not matter so much—once the first dreadful step was taken. Molly soon found she was incased in a practically seamless armor of apathy and indifference, which turned aside each recurring blow. She held the friendly and the curious alike at arm's length, went her way and asked nothing of anybody but to be left alone. The truth was, one poison had killed another.

To keep moving was her only salvation. Across her tiny room she went continuously back and forth while she coned her lessons or in the corridor moved up and down, up and down, to the rhythm of French verbs and Latin meters. Every hour that she could spare she was out of doors, walking feverishly, driven by her own particular allotment of furies. She covered every foot of road and trail and open country within reach again and again; walked until she was so spent she could not choose but lie quietly at night, even if she did not sleep. More often than not, when Gregory Cochran was in town, he would drop by the dormitory after the study hour, and the two of them would walk round and round the "perip" until bedtime—Molly's bedtime, which was early. Frequently not a word was spoken. He was notably the least talkative man in the state.

Mrs. Parker knew nothing of what had taken place after Molly left her house that August evening save what Cochran saw fit to tell her of an "accident" in the street. He did not mince words particularly as to her own remissness in letting the girl go out alone—under the circumstances. This weighed but lightly, however, on Mrs. Parker's ricocheting spirit. Assured that her protegee was in no serious danger—though she could not be moved for some weeks—her elastically hopeful old mind leaped at once to the gratifying conclusion that the "hand of the Lord" was in it. Before Gregory Cochran's broad and well-tailored back was fairly turned on the boarding-house he was a marked man.

As months passed and Cochran's kindly oversight of Molly's fate showed no signs of falling off, elation waxed to such triumphal intensity that she could not refrain from some hint of her prophetic imaginings—with the hope, no doubt, of having them confirmed. "Just wait 'til Stephen Renfro sees you in the Governor's mansion!" she exulted openly one day, when Molly had drowned in for a little kitchen visit. The visits were briefer and farther apart of late. They seemed not to have so much to talk about. "I reckon that'll make him sit up and take notice!"

Molly looked at her for some moments in blank and unenlightened silence. Her mind groped vainly for any intelligible point of contact. She had, of course, heard Gregory Cochran named in connection with the governorship, but no relation between that fact and herself had ever occurred to her. It did not occur to her now.

"Please," she concluded earnestly, "you must not only never say such a thing again; you mustn't even think of it. I'm no more to him than a half-drowned kitten he's pulled out of a slimy pond and warmed back to life. He's as impersonal as—as God."

Mrs. Parker shook her head, fondly unconvinced, but she agreed straightway to keep her own counsel, and Molly passed on to the business which had brought her over. She had saved fifteen dollars toward repaying the money she owed. "I wish it were the whole seventy-five," she said, opening her handbag and taking out the bills. "I know how much you need it."

The other pushed the money back across the table with floury hands, rumbling absently that she was not to bother her head about it. Far removed from such gross and earthy matters, she was rapidly envisaging Molly in a trailing velvet gown, hair done high, and jewels at her throat, biding grand eve in the Governor's mansion. "You don't owe it to me, now," she added, still from the depths of her trance.

Molly stared. "What do you mean—I don't owe it to you?" she demanded.

The fairy godmother raced back from the Governor's hall, minus her coach and four, and arrived some-what panicky and out of breath. "Why," she stammered, "I wasn't thinkin'."

"If I don't owe it to you," Molly persisted, not taking her eyes for an instant off the scared old face, "to whom do I owe it?"

"Oh, shucks! I wasn't sayin' any attention to what I was sayin'." Mrs. Parker poohpoohed manfully. "Of course you owe it to."

"To whom do I owe it?" Molly repeated, her voice chilling with the certainty of the truth.

SYNOPSIS

Gregory Cochran, lawyer and political leader, is sheltering in his mother's home, Molly Shannon, an untidy, uneducated, but very kind-hearted girl, when, wandering aimlessly at night, she plunged in. Molly had become despondent when deserted by her fiancé, Stephen Renfro, efficiency expert, who married the daughter of "rich old Jim Dilworth." Cochran, proving a true friend, is gradually winning Molly's confidence and she is relating her sorrows to him.

She was magnificent indeed. She was faultless, consummate—in every detail from the exquisite waves of silver drawn from brow to ears, the web of creamy old lace at throat and wrists, to the hem of her lustrous black silk. Her magnificence consisted, though, not in her clothes; neither in her edifice nor in the perfection of her grooming. Molly saw that at once, even while she shivered into nothingness in comparison. No, she was innately and predestinedly magnificent. It was in the very way she stood on the threshold—the quintessence of poise, the last word in presence. One had not far to seek where her son came by his sureness of motion, his "serene as a god above a storm."

To the latter she addressed herself, without noting, apparently, that there was anyone else in the room. "Good dear, the telephone is really getting too much for me."

After a barely perceptible pause, the older woman bowed—slightly.

and, besides, you know you're due in the court-room at eleven. . . . "Yes, mother, I'm just coming. But—while you're here, I want you to meet Miss Shannon. . . . He stepped a little to one side that there might be no further supposition of Molly's not being seen. "Miss Shannon, my mother."

After a barely perceptible pause, the older woman bowed—slightly. She was looking rather over Molly than at her, and she did not advance a step farther into the room.

Molly bowed also—in silence. "Miss Shannon, by the way, is going back to school on Monday," he added, unperturbed by his mother's evident disapproval of Molly and all that had to do with her. "We've just agreed it's the best possible thing." He turned to Molly with a humorous question in his eyes. "We have agreed, haven't we?"

"At least you have," she answered soberly. "It comes to the same. And, mother—I want you to ask Miss Shannon to have dinner with us as soon as she feels up to it—say tomorrow evening or the evening after. . . ."

There was a second pause, more portentous than the first. In the air was a measuring of swords. Molly felt it—over her head—as plainly as though she heard the clank of steel—why, she asked herself, dully resentful, should they be crossing swords over her? She didn't want to have dinner with them. She didn't want anything—but to be left alone.

At last Sarah Cochran said slowly but with meticulous courtesy. "We shall be glad to have Miss Shannon any time she cares to come, I'm sure." Her eyes were fixed, not on the prospective guest, but on her son.

PINCHOT REFUSES TO CERTIFY VARE AS DULY ELECTED

Informes Dawes That Senator-Elect "Appears to Have Been Chosen"; Action Promised.

(By Associated Press.) Harrisburg, Jan. 10.—Transmitting the returns of the November election for Senator from Pennsylvania to the President of the United States Senate Governor Pinchot has refused to certify that William S. Vare has been "duly chosen by the qualified electors" of the commonwealth.

Instead the governor departed from the customary form of such certificate and informed Vice President Dawes that Vare "appears to have been chosen" as Senator.

The governor said he could not certify that Vare had been "duly chosen" reiterating his belief that his nomination was "partly bought and partly stolen" and that "frauds committed in his interests had tainted both the primary and the general election."

Mr. Pinchot said that he would the certificate of election required by law so that he could sign it "without distorting the truth" in view of his conviction that the election returns "do not in fact correctly represent the will of the voters."

Washington, Jan. 10.—A resolution to reject the credentials of Senator-elect Vare of Pennsylvania will be called up whenever Governor Pinchot's qualified certificate of election is presented, Senator Dill, Democrat, Washington, said today.

MERCERSBURG'S MAIN HALL BURNS

Boys' Dormitory, Used As Hospital During Battle Here, Completely Destroyed.

"Old Main Hall" at Mercersburg Academy, used for a time after the battle of Gettysburg as a hospital for Confederate prisoners, was destroyed by fire early Sunday morning, entailing a loss estimated at $300,000. The building was erected in 1863 and at the time of the fire housed eighty boys and five teachers. All left the building unharmed and helped to fight the flames. The fire was discovered about 1:30 a. m. by a teacher and burned for several hours before it was brought under control.

"Old Main Hall" was four stories high and constructed of brick. In addition to the rooms for students and masters it contained the chemical laboratory, drafting room, library and the old chapel. Most of the 3,000 volumes in the library, many of them rare, and paintings of prominent alumni that hung in the chapel were destroyed.

Students saved all of their personal effects. The cause of the fire was not determined. Dr. W. M. Irvine, president of the academy, said the hall would be rebuilt at once.

Damage to the main heating system of the school caused by a falling wall necessitates closing of the academy for two weeks.

The late Calvin Coolidge, Jr., and John Coolidge, sons of President and Mrs. Coolidge, attended Mercersburg Academy. At the special request of Mrs. Coolidge they lived in the "Old Main Hall" while attending the school.

SERVICES HELD FOR HOME INMATE

Funeral services for Charles Worley, 55, native of Cumberland county, who died Friday evening at the Adams county home, were held Sunday afternoon at the home, the Rev. Earl J. Bowman, pastor of St. James Lutheran church, officiating. Interment was in Evergreen cemetery.

Mr. Worley lived in Cumberland county until five years ago, when he moved to the vicinity of Arendtsville where he lived alone until two weeks ago when he was taken ill and brought to the county home.

He is survived by four brothers and two sisters: John E., Carlisle; D. D. and William W., Cumberland county; Samuel, Hummelstown; Mrs. Carl Bolden, near Arendtsville, and Mrs. Sara Hershey, Lancaster county.

HIGH DEFEATS WILLIAM PENN

Harrisburg Tossers Trounced by Score of 30-21 in Hard Fought Battle Here.

Playing before a crowd that jammed every available seat in the high school gymnasium, the Gettysburg High School basketball five defeated the strong William Penn quintet Saturday night by the score, 30-21. The game was fast and rough and the throng was kept in an uproar by the litters of varied content.

The Maroon and White five started off with a rush. Lightner scoring from beneath the basket. On the play Charlie was fouled and he converted both chances to send the balls to a 4-0 lead. Captain Back of the Orange and Black team scored first for his team from the foul line. Trostle sunk a foul and Ross scored a long shot. Buchl landed two double-doubles and Lightner added another point from the foul line. The quarter ended with the locals holding a comfortable lead of seven points, the figures reading 10-2.

John Sadler opened the second quarter with a goal. William Penn then surprised and closed the wide zone by successive field goals by Boel, Dimm and Mathias. Sadler and Lightner landed short shots and Mathias countered with another double-decker. Trostle scored from the foul line as the quarter ended with Gettysburg leading, 17-11.

The scorer in the third period was slow. William Penn scored four points on a goal and two fouls by Boel. The Marthians netted three points on a goal by Trostle and a foul by Lightner. At the end of the third period the Maroon and White was still in front, 20-15.

The high team opened the final quarter with a rush. Lightner and Buchl landed short shots in rapid succession. Trostle sunk one through the meshes shortly afterwards. Dimm netted a foul toss. Lightner contributed his fourth goal of the evening. Dunkle made a pretty shot from close to the middle of the floor. Ross followed with a foul toss. Buchl dropped a double-decker from the side. Chenoweth was substituted for Dimm and immediately scored two goals and a foul, as the game ended.

The defense put up by the local warriors was practically impenetrable. The speedy William Penn forwards found difficulty in breaking through the five-man defense put up by the locals and resorted to long shots which failed to take effect. William Penn also exhibited a good defense but the local offense broke through several times. Mathias played a fine defensive game for the losers while

CARROLL MUST SERVE SENTENCE

(By Associated Press.) New York, Jan. 10.—Earl Carroll, theatrical producer, lost his appeal today from a sentence from a year and a day in Atlanta penitentiary for perjury committed in connection with a grand jury investigation into a "bath tub" party in his theatre.

He was brought to trial last spring after newspaper stories had been printed saying that at a party at the Carroll Theatre Joyce Hawley, a show girl, had served champagne to male guests from a bathtub on the stage in which she was seated undraped.

BOROUGH LIKELY TO TAKE ACTION AGAINST RAILROAD

Constant Blocking Of Crossings Causes Complaints To Be Made Before Authorities.

Action to enforce train crews of the Western Maryland and Reading lines to keep street crossings here from being blocked more than the five minutes allowed by borough ordinance is expected to be taken by local authorities.

The matter of passenger and freight trains blocking North Washington, Carlisle and North Stratton streets was discussed at the January meeting of council, but no action was taken except to urge Burgess C. A. Heiges to instruct policemen to strictly enforce the provision of the ordinance which prohibits the blocking of crossings for longer than five minutes at one time.

Several persons told councilmen about the inconvenience they had experienced recently by being held up from five to 20 minutes and even a half hour by passenger and freight trains. The Western Maryland, it was stated to council, is the most flagrant violator of the ordinance.

Fine Was Effective

Persons held up for various lengths of time, who have appealed to train crews to "cut" the train so as to allow pedestrian and vehicular traffic to move uninterruptedly, have almost always met with rebuff, although a few, upon protesting strongly, have succeeded in persuading the crews to "break" the train.

Several years ago trouble with train crews blocking crossings was experienced until a fine was imposed upon a crew which blocked a crossing for more than five minutes. For some time afterward, little difficulty was experienced but recently numerous instances of crossing blocking by freight and passenger trains have been reported to borough officials.

One councilman said he had been held up on Carlisle street while on his way to work for "at least 20 minutes," and that he finally clambered across the train between two cars. J. Donald Scope, borough solicitor, said he had had the same experience on various occasions.

NEW POST OFFICE FOR EAST BERLIN

The post office at East Berlin, Adams county, will have new and larger quarters by April 1, it was learned today. The post office department has leased a building in East Berlin owned by J. W. Smith, who is now equipping the place for service as a post office. It is expected to be ready for occupancy within three months.

The present post office building at East Berlin has proved inadequate due to increased business at that office, and John Anthony, postmaster at East Berlin, and Congressman Menges, York, presented the needs for a larger post office to the post office department with the result that new quarters have been obtained.

MAN MURDERED IN CHAMBERSBURG

Found in Rear of Neighbor's Home With Bullet Wound in Head; Victims Gone.

With a revolver near him, Richard Irvin Hackensmith, 44 years old, a machinist, was found dead in Chambersburg early Sunday morning, under conditions which lead Coroner Shull to the theory that the man was slain.

There was a bullet wound behind the left ear which the coroner says could not have been self-inflicted. Absence of blood where he was found leads to the belief that the man was killed and his body taken there.

Hackensmith, a machinist for the Chambersburg Engineering Company, lived with his mother, Mrs. Ida Hackensmith. About midnight Saturday he returned home after other members of the family had retired.

His sister, Bessie, awakened by his arrival, says she asked him to get her a handkerchief. The brother complied and later she heard him leave the house again.

About 7 o'clock Sunday morning Mrs. Carrie Stoner, who lives near, notified the authorities that her son had found the body of a man lying in the dooryard at the rear of their home.

The body was identified as Hackensmith. His arms, stiff from the cold, were stretched out above his head. Beneath them was a revolver of .22 caliber.

In the pockets of the clothing were found a half dollar and a door key. A watch and billfold, in which relatives say Hackensmith carried his money, were not found.

Coroner Shull will hold an inquest Tuesday.

In addition to his mother, Hackensmith is survived by three brothers, Charles and Lester, of Chambersburg, and Harry, of York, and a sister, Bessie, at home.

NEW-BORN BABY FOUND IN STREAM

W. C. WEAVER TO MANAGE STORE FATHER FOUNDED

Takes Charge Pending Settlement Of Estate Of Gettysburg's Leading Merchant.

The G. W. Weaver and Son department store, Centre Square, reopened for business today with the third generation at the managerial helm.

Closed since the death of H. T. Weaver last Wednesday evening, the store today was again functioning smoothly with William G. Weaver, assistant manager since 1922, at the reins as manager.

After opening the store this morning, Mr. Weaver issued the following statement:

"Pending settlement of the estate of my father, I will act as general manager of G. W. Weaver and Son's store, continuing the policies of my father and instituting new and better methods of doing business wherever practicable, so that our many patrons in Gettysburg and Adams county may have the same confidence in the new management as they displayed in the old."

The new general manager is a grandson of Greenberry William Weaver, whose name the place of business has borne since it was opened here in April, 1885. G. W. Weaver and his son, H. T. Weaver, came to Gettysburg from Maryland to found the G. W. Weaver and Son department store, now the largest in Adams county.

Assistant Since 1922

William G. Weaver was born in Gettysburg and received his education in the public schools here and at Gettysburg College where he graduated in 1921. After graduating, Mr. Weaver immediately entered his father's business, learning the details of the purchasing and retailing ends by active participation with buyers and clerks.

Mr. Weaver entered the business as assistant general manager in 1922, since then devoting much of his time to advertising.

After outlining his position to his fellow-workers, all of those associated in the business pledged their wholehearted support to the new manager, promising to "pitch in" and work as diligently for him as they had for his father.

Mr. Weaver has resigned as treasurer of the borough council so as to be able to devote all of his time to the business.

Mr. Weaver was married to Miss Anna Miller, daughter of Postmaster and Mrs. Robert C. Miller, in June, 1922. They reside at the corner of Collis street and Broadway.

$134.43 WAS FIRE LOSS IN BOROUGH DURING PAST YEAR

Thompson Blaze Only One In Which Damage Was Done During 1926; Answered 42 Alarms.

Gettysburg's fire loss in 1926 was $134.43, the smallest amount in recent years, according to a survey of the records of the local fire department, made public today by James B. Ammen, chief.

The company responded to 42 alarms in 1926, 26 of which were in the borough. In only one of the borough alarms was damage sustained, the loss in the Thompson home fire, Carlisle street, December 18, being $134.43.

The total loss sustained in the out-of-town alarms was not computed by the fire department, since in most instances the company has considerable distance to go and alarms are not received until the fires have gained considerable headway.

The company responded to calls in every month last year except August. January, with 10 alarms, led the other months. Most of the alarms answered during the year were for chimney fires. January 28 and December 18 led the other days in the year in the number of alarms, three having been turned in on those days.

And That's That

—by—

John Ruth

The God-fearing and Coolidge-loving state of Vermont has come face to face with a most heart-rending condition—their one remaining ambition being that of naming a mountain for their beloved Cal. Such an ambition would seem easily gratified; yet the Vermonters have been unable to find a suitable mountain to carry Coolidge's name. We would suggest that arrangements be made to take over the "Great Stone Face" mountain as a Coolidge memorial.

At one time or another one is apt to take a trip. Just what one sees, what information one gathers and what experiences and reactions one may have depend, perhaps, on one's environment and philosophy of life. For example, we have been informed of a young lady, a resident of Allentown, who made a visit to our historic town and battlefields. She was so greatly impressed with the trip that she wrote her experience:—

"When we went to Gettysburg we started four o'clock. When we were going down nineteenth street it was very cold. We did not see many machines. We went on till we met my cousins who were waiting for us. My father did not know the way.

"When we stopped for my cousin, my cousin said one of us could come on their machine. My sister wanted to go on their machine. Then she said I could go on their machine. There were only five on our machine there were ten on our machine. There were two in the front of the machine and seven in the back of our machine. In my cousin's machine there were two in the front and three in the back. I had to sit on a chair in the back of the machine.

"It was very cold. My cousins, who were sitting in the back had a cover. I did not have any. When it was about six o'clock we were in Reading. When we were pretty far in Reading my uncle said he had to get more gas. He stopped at a garage for some gas but nobody was there. So we went on. While we were going we saw a big milk bottle. It was much bigger than I am. When we were near Gettysburg a man stopped and we showed us some pictures. After we saw them we bought some. Then we went on till we came to Gettysburg. When we were in Gettysburg we saw the instrument the soldiers used to fight. We went until we saw a high tower. We went in every tower we saw. We went in one that had one hundred twenty-six cement steps before you get in the tower. There are one hundred one steps while you are on the tower I used to run up and down steps. While we were going off the tower we saw a big stone. My sister took the baby on. Then I went on too. After that we went home. We got home at half past eight. Then we ate supper after we did the dishes we went to bed. The next day my mother was sick."

Much to our surprise the Co-ed basketball game last Friday evening with Juniata was a very fine exhibition of girls' basketball. The girls won and they certainly deserved to win. They showed evidence of some good coaching and earnest application to their daily grind without which no team can be successful. The column sincerely trusts they will not become over-confident because of their victory for we dare say the remaining teams will form a more formidable opposition. We were particularly impressed with the form (basketball technique) of Miss Melba Richards and with the accurate shooting of the Gettysburg forwards. Coach "Charlie" Hall has a real find in Miss Melba Richards.

Of what good is an education to a co-ed? Princess Tarhata Kiram, attractive daughter of the Sultan of Sulu and graduate of the University of Illinois, surrendered to tradition and the influence of the tropics and entered the harem of Datu Tahir, a high Sulu dignitary.

After returning from her educational sojourn in the United States, the princess wore bobbed hair, short skirts and rolled hosiery, and tried to live a western life in her native surroundings, but it did not last long. She is wife No. 4 in the harem. Four wives is all the Mohammedan law allows a man.

Double-check if the princess had had enough sense to keep away from a college she could have entered the harem with a higher ranking. However we dare say the old Sulu dignitary has many surprises in store for him.

60 Pupils Saved From Burning School

(By Associated Press.)

Philadelphia, Jan. 10.—Sixty pupils of the parochial school of Our Mother of Sorrows church were trapped by smoke and fire which swept through the gymnasium in the basement today. Firemen and volunteers climbing ladders to the third floor carried the children and their teachers down to the streets in safety.

More than 1500 children with 36 nuns in charge were in the building when the janitor discovered the fire. The sisters gave the alarm and summoned the children to fire drills. For the first few minutes the pupils were unaware that this was different from the regular fire drills. Taking their places in line, the boys and girls marched out of the classrooms into the corridors. Smoke came drifting up the halls and the children realized there was a fire. They were calmed by the teachers and all the pupils on the first and second floors were soon in the streets. The pupils on the third floor were not able to get out. Time to escape the heavy smoke.

THEATRE FIRE IS FATAL TO 90

Children Patrons Are Crushed in Rush For Exits as Montreal Movie House Burns.

Montreal, Jan. 10.—Nearly 90 lives were lost in a frenzied rush from the Laurier Palace moving-picture theatre, in the East End, when fire broke out Sunday afternoon.

Most of the dead are children. Many were injured. The fire started under the floor of the balcony, and the cry of a boy who noticed it caused a stampede for the doors.

The theatre has a seating capacity of 1100 persons, and it was filled with the usual large Sunday afternoon audience. The fire itself did little damage and was soon under control.

Firemen of the St. Catherine street East station saw the smoke and ran at once with their apparatus. They found the east side stairway jammed with children. The bodies were wedged so closely together that twenty men tugged in vain at a rope tied around the body of one child. This was on the stairway a few steps from the main floor. The firemen again tried to remove some of the human mass, but found it impossible.

They then broke through the street wall and the victims were passed out through the opening by a chain of men.

Each little victim was examined and those who showed signs of life were carried into nearby stores, private dwellings and the police and fire stations. The majority of the victims were found to have died of suffocation. All ambulances were summoned from the hospitals and many private practitioners worked on the sufferers in the freezing cold without coats or hats.

When the dead and injured had been removed the firemen turned their attention to the flames which had made their way around the balcony and through the wall to the front of the theatre. The fire was quickly extinguished. Had there been no stampede it is possible that few would have been hurt.

MOUNTAINEERS HAD GOOD YEAR

Teams in Three Major Sports Made Good Showings Against Strong Opponents.

With the coming of 1927 Mount St. Mary's College students of Emmitsburg are reviewing the year just ended with much satisfaction on the accomplishments of the Blue and White teams in the three principal sports.

In basketball and baseball the Maryland institution compiled very creditable records while the warriors of the gridiron, young and inexperienced as were the majority of them, performed remarkably well in the difficult schedule with which they had to cope.

The basketball team won thirteen and lost nine games, the most encouraging form being displayed on the annual New York trip when victories were gained over Manhattan and Seton Hall Colleges while the third contest was dropped to the Crescent Athletic Club, without doubt one of the best quartets in the country, by a very close score.

The diamond athletes duplicated the success of the court performers turning in thirteen triumphs out of twenty-two games. Among the victories of the Mountaineer nine were Gettysburg, Bucknell, Lafayette, Georgetown, Navy, V. P. I., Davis and Elkins, Loyola, of Baltimore, twice, and Albright.

Football claimed much interest at the Mountain. The Blue and White gridgers won three, tied two and lost four games. When considering such formidable opponents as Fordham University, Davis and Elkins, Lebanon Valley and Pennsylvania Military College, the results can be looked upon as gratifying while to some enthusiasts the exceptional defense shown in the final game at Baltimore with Loyola College when the Evergreen institution was held to a 7-7 tie made the season a success.

Summing up the results of contests in all three sports with the two state teams, Washington College and Loyola, the Mountaineers emerged on top, having taken three victories and two defeats from the former and faring even better with the latter when three were won, one tied and one lost.

The prospects for added success for the coming year are most encouraging. Improvements have made in arranging the schedules of the three sports and keen interest should be manifested in all games listed and admirers of clean college sport in this section will have an opportunity of witnessing competition worth while.

At the annual meeting of the National Collegiate Association, held in New York during the holidays, Mount St. Mary's College application was accepted by the membership committee and the Mountain institution is enrolled with all the leading colleges and universities of the country and will have the benefit of central board of football officials and other matters pertaining to college athletics.

Miss Nobody

An eminent cast was gathered by First National in support of Anna Q. Nilsson, who has the featured feminine lead in "Miss Nobody," which comes Monday and Tuesday to the Strand Theatre here.

The featured supporting cast comprises Louise Fazenda, Walter Pidgeon, Mitchell Lewis, Clyde Cook and Arthur Stone. Lambert Hillyer directed "Miss Nobody," Wid Gunning, noted screen critic, exercised editorial guidance.

"Miss Nobody" is an adaptation of Tiffany Wells' novel "Shebo," which gained enormous popularity in book and serial form. It is a story of a hobo life, with Miss Nobody, or Shebo, as queen of the tramps.

The story of "Miss Nobody" details the adventures of a society girl who seeks the solace of vagabondage rather than suffer the indignity of dependence upon friends when her father's fortune goes by the board.

Comedy At Lincoln Way

As a re-issued attraction, the Lincoln Way Theatre will show, today only, the big William Fox film version of Mark Twain's funniest book,

"A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court."

As readers of Mark Twain will realize, this book offers wonderful scope to a motion picture director, and it is surprising that no producer until now has undertaken to put it on the screen. The Fox production is on a huge scale, bringing out the full force of all the situations invented by Mark Twain's fertile imagination; and translating for the eye all the splendor of medieval court life that Twain had described in words. It aroused the greatest enthusiasm at a pre-release run in Los Angeles.

"A Connecticut Yankee" is more than funny; it conveys an argument of striking force. It sets out to prove the thesis that we are as good as our great-great-grandfathers. It is the fashion nowadays to talk of the "good old times"; Mark Twain shows us just what the "good old times" really were like. "A Connecticut Yankee" is an imaginative masterpiece.

Charles E. Karlak, mayor, and Jim Lewis, postmaster of Birchwood, Alaska, trudged 21 miles to Anchorage to cast the two qualified votes of their district at the last general election.

The scrubs exhibited a wonderful defense when the William Penn tossers found impossible to break through. At half time the local led, 7-6. The second half saw more scoring, Gettysburg netting 18 points to the visitors' 12. The work of Gilbert and Myers stood out for the home club while Chenoweth featured for the losers.

Well, the "January thaw" didn't in the forest. I'm not afraid of any last long. Just a couple of days, for thing or anyone."

Old Mr. North Wind came down from the mountains and froze everything up tight again. But this didn't worry the little rabbit. No indeed. He hopped through the leafless forest on the hard snow crust, looking here and peering there, stopping often to twinkle his pretty pink nose to find, if possible, the scent of Danny Fox's old fur overcoat. This wise little rabbit was ever on the watch lest this hairy old robber should suddenly jump out from behind a bush. But there was no fox smell in the wind; so on hopped the bunny boy, his little knapsack bouncing up and down on his back and his red-striped candy cane swinging

On reaching the Shady Forest Pond, he skipped over the ice, pausing now and then to see, if possible, Busy Beaver swimming down below in the water. But the ice was not clear enough to show that little beaver as he pulled up from the bottom a tender root for breakfast.

"Dear me. Most of my friends are asleep for the winter. Yes, they are hidden in their warm burrows," sighed the bunny boy, when all of a sudden a little voice called to him.

"Who's calling?" asked the startled little rabbit.

"I'm not asleep in a burrow," cried the same little voice, and the next minute

Tiny, the Common Shrew, peeped out from under an old log. For a moment the bunny boy thought Timmy Meadowmouse was speaking to him. But he changed his mind mighty quick when Tiny, the Common Shrew, showed himself. Not much to show, for he was only a little over three and a half inches in length, about half as long as Timmy Meadowmouse.

"You didn't know me at first," laughed Tiny. "Maybe you had to take a second look, for I'm a pretty small mouse, although my tail is long enough—nearly as long as my head and body."

"So it is," admitted the bunny boy. "Timmy Meadowmouse has a short tail."

"No easy matter to find food these cold winter days," admitted Tiny.

agreed Tiny. "I can take better care of myself than you can," and in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Experience occasionally finds it necessary to repeat the lesson.

Philosophy always loses in an argument with carache.

"You didn't know me at first,"

"Well, I'll tell you a few more things," went on Tiny, the Common Shrew. "In the summer time I have great fun chasing beetles. They make a very good dinner. I also like grasshoppers. But they are harder to catch. I creep up without their hearing me, and then pounce on them."

"Well, I never," exclaimed the bunny boy. "You certainly are a fierce little hunter. Dear, dear. So many feathered and furry people are hunters. I must be ever on the lookout to escape

Danny Fox and Old Man Weasel, to say nothing of Hungry Hawk and Hooty Tooty Owl. My best friends are Busy Beaver and Woody Wood-chuck. They don't hunt others, but eat vegetables and grain, the same as I do."

"Don't blame you for being scary," agreed Tiny. "I can take better care of myself than you can," and in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Experience occasionally finds it necessary to repeat the lesson.

Out of the Past

Happenings of Days Gone by as Chronicled in The Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times, the Files Reveal.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

U. S. Navy.—From the report of the Secretary of the Navy accompanying the message of the president it appears that the whole naval force authorized by law consists of 12 ships of the line, exclusive of two on Lake Ontario; 17 frigates of the 1st class, 3 frigates of the 2d class, 16 sloops of war, 4 schooners of 12 guns, and 3 other vessels.

The whole of these with the exception of three of the frigates could be prepared for active service at sea, in a few months, should the situation and interests of the nation demand their employment.

Married.—On the 4th inst., by the Rev. L. L. Hirsch, Jacob Hereter to Miss Sarah Mickle, both of Franklin township.

Steamboat Accident.—On Wednesday last, the steamboat North Carolina, on her passage from Fayetteville to Wilmington, North Carolina, struck a snag and almost immediately filled and sunk. The water, however, did not reach her deck, so that the passengers (three in number) easily saved themselves and baggage. The freight, we believe, was chiefly cotton, which was saved.—Fayetteville Obs.

A Steward.—The Directors of the Poor and House of Employment of the County of Adams will receive proposals from the date hereof until the 31st inst. from candidates for the stewardship of that institution, for one year from the 1st of April next. The proposals may be left with Mr. Newman at the poorhouse, or with either of the directors, under seal.

By order of the Board,
John Garvin, Clerk.

January 9.

In the city of New York, says the Commercial Advertiser, there are upwards of one hundred and sixty lottery offices. The proceeds for licenses in that state go to the Deaf and Dumb and the school fund.

Another Stage Accident.—On Friday evening last, one of the stages of the Albany and Boston line, in descending a hill near Northampton, was overturned, the driver instantly killed and a passenger injured so severely that he died on the day following. The name of the driver was Jones, who is represented as having been careful and experienced in his business. It is supposed that some of the springs of the stage gave way, as the accident occurred after having arrived at the foot of the hill. Balt. Chron.

SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO
This section of the country was visited on Tuesday morning last by a regular old-fashioned snow storm. The snow fell thick and fast for about 12 hours, covering the ground to the depth of 15 inches.

Still Colder.—The mercury yesterday morning went down to 13 degrees below zero in this place—being a degree lower than on the 27th ult.

County Officers.—On Wednesday last, Thomas Warren, Esq., county treasurer elect, was inducted into office in the room of Samuel Fahnestock, Esq., whose term expires. It is no more than due to Mr. Fahnestock to say that in retiring from office he carries with him the good will of all who have had official intercourse with him. We annex a full list of the county officers at the present time.

The best "hit" ever made at an impropriety in lady's dress was by Talleyrand. During the revolution when asked by a lady his opinion of her dress, he replied that it "began too late and ended too soon."

The Female Medical College of Pennsylvania, located in Philadelphia, had its first annual commencement on Tuesday last. The degree of M. D. was conferred upon eight females.

The police force of Philadelphia number 600 men, that of New York, 800. The annual salaries amount in Philadelphia to $95,000; those of New York are estimated at $54,000.

LOOKING FORWARD

In the days that were, I said:
"Joy is waiting just ahead,
Happier shall I be then
When I've joined the ranks of men."

Always calling seemed to be
Some new happiness for me,
And when courting her I said:
"Glad I'll be when we are wed."

Joy we've found and journeyed on,
Dreams have come and dreams have gone,
Every day has held in view
Something to look forward to.

Still we dream and still we see
Happiness that is to be,
Still, in spite of hurts and tears,
Joy still lures us down the years.

Lovely old, and lovely new,
There is much we long to do,
Much we're praying we shall see
In the days which are to be.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

DETACHMENT

WERE it not for the fact that a higher power than ourselves rules our destiny, some of us would present to the world a sad figure indeed.

It is to this same higher power that we owe our ability to detach the best of ourselves from the worst. So that out of the direst days of distress we may find a sunny spot for our souls.

The real leader detaches himself from the worries and petty irritations that swarm like bees about him.

Take the least of us. If we took all of our troubles with us everywhere we went (and don't forget that troubles multiply from themselves) we would soon stumble from their load and become useless to ourselves and to everybody else.

I have watched many an executive work. He takes his problems one by one. He bushes aside the pesky, barking "camp followers," so inseparable to every real big problem, and then puts his entire mind upon a plan, crystallizing that plan into a decision and then going on to the next task.

If any of us would have a measure of happiness, this lesson must be learned—we must detach ourselves as we go along. We must see the one important thing in our lives and follow that to its successful conclusion.

A really big man can build an empire while sitting silently in a company of chatters, they having no idea that he has been bored out of their world.

When we go out into our new day we have no idea as to what it is going to be, no idea as to the exact nature of our contacts. But from some of them we are sure to gain. Our ability to detach ourselves from the unimportant will be the thing that will have more to do with our successful day than anything else.

Detachment from disappointment—what an art!

The Prince of Wales speaking: "I love singing in chorus, but I don't think I could sing a solo before a crowd to save my life. It's the one thing I'm afraid of."

He was talking to a man he had met in the ante room of the Free Trade Hall. Said the man later:

"He then asked me to come and have one, but I told him I was a teetotaler and he said he admired my principles. Then he asked me if I would have a cigar and I took it with the idea of keeping it as a memento. But he produced a match and I couldn't very well refuse to light up, though when he left I put the cigar out and I'm keeping the half that's left as a family heirloom."

A new novel by Maxim Gorky is to be published in England this month. He calls it "Decadence" and with his characteristically mordant pen traces the fortunes of a family of Russian factory owners through three generations.

First there is the sturdy peasant, who by his indomitable purpose creates the firm, and last there are his grandchildren, whose shoulders are not strong enough to bear the burden of their inheritance.

The chief character is Pyotr Artamonov, whose life is minutely described in relation to his family, to the outside world, and to his own inner consciousness. "Decadence" begins in the Czarist times and covers the World War, the Russian revolution, and Bolshevism.

The glories of the British empire exhibition at Wembley have fast faded under the hands of the contractors. One of the contractors summarized the position in this way:

"The Palace of Beauty is now lying on one of the new arterial roads: Ceylon is a coach-building factory in London; Nigeria is a garage in Preston; the Gold Coast is a garage in Huddersfield; Palestine will soon be a laundry in Glasgow, and West India a factory at New Malden; last Africa has become a furniture factory at Letchworth, and Sierra Leone an Irish restaurant in County Waterford."

A psychic science club has been added to the Lyceum Circle, one of the largest women's organizations in England. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle helped put it over. Addressing the new group, the knight-mystic said that spiritualism is a very cluable thing.

"There is nothing which draws people into such intimate and charming intercourse as a common interest in psychic matters," he said.

Sir Arthur spoke of a spiritualistic conversation he had with Lord Northcliffe in New York, and asserted that the late publisher was working very hard in their cause on the other side.

"W. Bird," the Punch artist, strolled through Mayfair the other day with his hands clasped behind his back, his head in the air, and a pince-nez depending from a band of black silk attached to his button hole.

Not many persons know that "W. Bird" is Senator W. B. Yeats, of the Irish Free State, whom posterity will remember not so much as an artist or a statesman, but as one of the most delightful poets in the twentieth century.

Lord and Lady De La Warr, who have taken a house in a mews near Victoria, startled the neighboring chauffeurs by erecting a galvanized iron cage outside their door. It is for their baby to play in the open air without being able to wander off.

Wilfred, a rabbit which was owned jointly by King George and little Kathleen Tomlinson, is dead. Several months ago, upon learning that Kathleen's brother, Bob, wished to sell his share in the rabbit, the king paid him ten shillings for it and so with Kathleen went "fifty-fifty" on Wilfred.

This happened in August when Kathleen was recovering from a serious illness. Wilfred met his fate, in the jaws of a stray dog which got into his pen.

classes of people is remarkable. There is little doubt that he has introduced art into the western dramas and has created thereby a large following.

Much of his success is due to William Fox's presentation and direction of his pictures. Today Tom Mix stands as one of the few actors in western pictures who have as big a drawing power in the large cities as in the smaller towns.

An excellent supporting cast is in evidence throughout the picture and the story is a good one with its touch of the part of the modern plainsman in the great World War.

In addition to the "Canyon of Light" Fox presents a two-reel comedy "Babes in the Jungle" and the always interesting Fox News.

WEALTH RULING CHURCH, DECLARES BISHOP M'CONNELL

Baltimore, Jan. 10.—Asserting that America is a pagan nation and needs a form of patriotism other than flag waving, Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of Pittsburgh, of the Methodist Episcopal church, told a men's meeting at the Garden Theatre yesterday that his church was ruled indirectly by wealth.

The bishop said he could name a Methodist minister who preached a sermon in favor of the poor at a time when a controversy was raging between them and the wealthy. He said he had investigated the cause of the trouble, the bishop asserted, and was convinced that the poor were in the right.

"But," the bishop continued, "the chill that rose from his congregation could be felt right in the pulpit. That minister hasn't said anything about that subject since, for he knows that if he did he would lose his job. The last I heard of him he was writing articles for magazines, saying that preachers shouldn't do just the thing that he did."

"Of course, if he had had the spirit he would have kept on. I'm not a Catholic and no man can make me one, but I want to say this, that the glory of the old church was that if a man had anything to say he could speak out without greatly endangering himself."

$400,000,000 FOR SCHOOL DISTRICTS

This Amount Necessary For 1,800,000 Pupils Who Are Attending Public Institutions.

Harrisburg.—The school districts of Pennsylvania will spend approximately $400,000,000 in the 1925-27 biennium for the 1,800,000 students enrolled in the public schools. Dr. Francis B. Haas, superintendent of public instruction, declared in a report for the two year period ending May 31, last, made public recently. Of this amount $65,190,169 will be contributed by the state and $1,900,459 by the Federal government.

The report points out that 87.8 cents of each dollar contributed by the state and Federal governments goes directly to the local school districts; 8.7 cents to state-aided universities and colleges; 2.1 cents to other educational agencies such as boards and commissions and 1.4 cents to supervision of this expenditure.

The report disclosed that each pupil attended school five more days in the 1924-25 year than in 1922-23, that the sessions of unexcused absences per pupil decreased from two to one, that the sessions of excused absences from 28 to 26 and that the percentage of attendance increased from 99.4 to 92.1.

Dr. Haas asserted that Pennsylvania teachers now are better prepared for their work than at any previous time in the history of the schools. He said that while in 1921-22, 6,703 of a total of 48,000 teachers had received no special training for their specific positions, in 1924-25 only 412 teachers out of 53,696 were without specific training for their work.

During the past two years 3,850 boys and girls completed junior projects in connection with their vocational agricultural studies in the schools with an enrollment of approximately 40,000 pupils. Home economics education now forms a part of the curricula in 303 junior and senior high schools and 560 classes were conducted in special education for handicapped children.

Reports submitted the department disclosed that the school building program within the biennium was the heaviest in the history of the state, expenditures for this purpose exceeding more than $35,000,000. The department provided plans and specifications for 694 new and reconstructed buildings.

Tile Benefits Farm Lands—Tile drains make a better crop in any year, wet or dry; lengthen the growing season, spring and fall, by warming the soil; remove surplus water, permitting earlier cultivation after rains; reduce heaving or throwing out frost, and "winter killing"; increase the supply of available plant food; help the growth of desirable organisms; improve granulation; reduce clod formation; deepen root zone for crops; reduce hillside erosion; cut seepage from lowland, and make a big return on the investment when properly applied.

Consider the Consumer—In making out a nursery order, except for the home orchard, select varieties according to the preference of the consumer rather than your own. Plant only varieties that are standard on the market you expect to use, say Pennsylvania State College fruit specialists.

Save the Landscaping—When shoveling snow off walks and porches be careful not to bury flower borders and fancy dwarf evergreens under masses of snow. After heavy snowfalls, and especially after ice storms, beat the load off branches of evergreens to prevent breakage.

SYNOPSIS

Molly Shannon, university student, has recovered at the home of the Cochran, where Gregory Cochran, bachelor lawyer, had taken her after rescuing her from the river. Molly had been driven desperate by the treachery of Stephen Renfro, efficiency expert, who deserted her and married the wealthy Miss Dillworth. Cochran has introduced Molly to his mother, who is proud and aristocratic, and not too well pleased to have the girl in her house.

Mrs. Parker was like a game little rat, hopelessly cornered, but with lots of fight left in her. "Well, you know, Stephen Renfro he was always at me—wantin' to lend me money for you. . . . He knew how bad you needed it. . . ."

"Oh. . . .!" Molly turned with a violent movement and walked over to the door which opened on the back yard. After a considerable silence she said, "It was he, then, who gave me the money for these. . . ." She indicated without looking at them the suit, shoes, hat she was wearing. They were the only respectable ones she had.

"Well," the distraught fairy god-mother admitted unwillingly, "it began the time your father died. I didn't have a red cent, and you had to go. . . ."

"That too. . . .!" Presently Molly faced round and came toward the cook table.

"Don't think I blame you," she said quietly. "I know you only did what you thought was best for me. But—"

I've got to plan some way to return that money. I'll be going now."

In her room at the dormitory she tore the clothes off and flung them intolerantly from her. They were no longer new.

Seventy-five dollars. For all her resources to pay, the sum might as well have been that many thousands. The fifteen dollars she had offered Mrs. Parker meant going without a badly needed raincoat and the sacrifice of some of her most precious belongings.

"Ten dollars—I" she echoed in a small, stammered voice. He shrugged. She could take it or not.

There was no other look that could be sold, not a cent to be squeezed from anywhere. Her scholarship covered merely the necessities; the little that she was able to pick up from coaching went to her mother. She had never owned a piece of jewelry in her life. Yet somehow Stephen Renfro must be paid.

Sitting in her undress on the edge of the bed, she looked up and caught her reflection in the mirror opposite. Was there anything of her very own that she might sell? She leaned closer to the mirror and scrutinized herself attentively. Her teeth were sound, white—flawless as Stephen had often said. Faint lines in her forehead had faded hers, but that was a long time ago. They could not have had a false one then.

The obvious asset, of course, was her hair. She took out the pins and let it slip, a shining, blue-black veil below her waist. It was very thick and slightly curling at the tips. Perhaps they would buy that.

She twisted it up again hurriedly, brought it on the closest of a front, long she collected to second best, pinned on a sailor, almost as old as her own career at the university, and went out.

There were less than half a dozen hairdressing establishments in the town and at every place it was the same story—repeated with either a condescending or a pitying smile for her pitiable ignorance. Hair was not done there. It had gone out of style—this with a supercilious glance which indicated how hopelessly out of the mode Molly herself was. What little hair was used passed its in Europe finished at a few cents a pound.

Put—surely they would give her something for it, she insisted despairingly at the last place. The proprietor shook his head, the while he eyed her curiously up and down. No, it wouldn't pay them to bother with a single switch, not even if she gave it to them. Her hair was quite worthless to everybody except—possibly herself! But as she was going away, absolutely crushed, an elderly, coiffed blond head was thrust out of a cubbyhole. Its owner looked once at Molly, twice at her hair, and beckoned to the man. It seemed there was by the merest coincidence a customer who wanted that color—Molly's hair leaped. How much would they give her for it, she asked eagerly.

Oh, by stretching a point, maybe as much as ten dollars. The man made an impressive gesture.

"Ten dollars. . . .!" she echoed in a small, stammered voice. He shrugged. She could take it or leave it. They were only anxious to accommodate her.

Twenty minutes later she came out of the shop, feeling light and queer and intensely conspicuous. Her pocket was heavier by only nine dollars. They charged a dollar—this she learned after the deed was done—for cutting it off. Of the avarice and cruelty of the shop-keeping class to those who are in distress she knew a little already. She was to know more. . . .

She was not thinking of that now. She sat down on a bench in the Capitol grounds, took out her small store, and counted it. Fifty one dollar was lacking still. She put the money back in her bag and sat gazing despondently at the ground. She had nothing else to sell—the seventy-five dollars must go to Stephen Renfro before she slept. . . .

After a time, a newspaper, sprawling where some former occupant of the bench had left it, claimed her dispirited attention. She picked it up, glanced indifferently at the front page, then turned slowly toward the want columns.

A half hour later, she presented herself at the larger of the city's two hospitals. To the girl at the desk she indicated one of the advertisements in the paper. "This says that one of your patients needs some blood from a young, healthy person, and is willing to pay for it. Do you think he would pay as much as fifty-one dollars?"

The girl stared even more curiously than the proprietors of the hairdressing places had done. Her stare took in the shabby dress, the clipped hair, the ancient sailor. "I don't know," she said moving away rather doubtfully. "I'll ask Doctor Rodney."

Directly a young and pleasant-faced doctor appeared. He gave Molly a brisk, business-like once-over, which included also the short hair, the old dress and sailor—and something besides. "Come in here," he opened the door into an inner office.

He motioned her to a chair and sat down opposite—at his desk. "You don't look as if you had any more blood than you need yourself," was his blunt comment, after a second and longer inspection.

"I need the money worse," she said simply. "Do you think they will pay as much as fifty-one dollars?"

"Well, one can hardly put a price on that sort of thing. . . . He shifted a little at the desk to get a better angle. "In fact, it's not usual to pay for such services at all, but—let's patient's happens to be a man of means. He wishes to offer some compensation. I can't say precisely how much. . . ."

"Anything less than fifty-one dollars won't do me any good," Molly spoke not less bluntly than he had done a moment earlier.

"Fifty-one dollars. Hum—!—that's quite a lot, you know," He gave her another intent glance.

Just a minute—I'll see. . . . Before Molly slept that night a money order, with the briefest of lines in Mrs. Parker's handwriting was dispatched to one Mr. Stephen Renfro at an address in New York City.

CHAPTER XIX

Molly's graduation in June came off in a small blaze of glory. There were, among other things, offers of two Eastern fellowships, but these she did not allow herself the luxury even of considering. Some months earlier she had applied for the principalship of the two-teacher Laws' Chapel school. The salary was less than she might have had elsewhere, but she could make it count for more at home and—her mother needed her. Aunt Lena wrote that she had not been so well of late.

Toward the end of Commencement week Cochran brought an invitation to tea. Molly mistrusted that it had been won by a species of coercion, but she did not wish to rebuff his kindness. She presented herself at the appointed hour, and was received in state by the mistress of the place—not more cordially, perhaps, than the difference in ages warranted.
